J. W. Hambly, a hog dealer, has an action pending against German Wagar a farmer of North Fredericksburgh, claiming $500 for slander. In the spring of 1907, the foundation for the G. T. R. freight scales was renewed, and a loose stone got under the scales, in such a way as to affect its balance. Hambly had a number of hogs weighed before the trouble was discovered, but immediately upon becoming aware of the fact adjusted the matter satisfactorily with the owners of the hogs. It is alleged that Wagar referred to the incident in slanderous statements. Wagar applied to Master-in-Chambers Cartwright for particulars of certain paragraphs of Hambly's statement of claim. His lordship has directed particulars; and Hambly will be debarred from giving evidence as to certain things.

WORK WILL CURE WORRY PALACE IS POORHOUSE

Absorbs the Thought and Energies and Avoids Habit of Fretting.

"Fret not thyself; it lendeth only to
"ill doing."—Ps. XXXVIII, 8 R. V. L.

Worry is wicked because it causes weakness. It robs the life of its powers; it thwarts our possibilities. Anxiety is wrong, not because it indicates infidelity as to the wise and loving providence governing life, but because it is a criminal waste of life's forces; it prevents our doing our own work, and it irritates and hinders others.

What a great cloud would be lifted from our world if all the needless fears and frowns were chased away. One seething man, going to his work, worrying over it, will spread the contagion of apprehension and cowardly fretfulness through almost every group with which he mingles. Our mental health has as much to do with our success and happiness as any other thing.

The fog that bothers us most of all is that we carry on our faces, that which rises from our heart fears. Once savage man lived in perpetual fear of innumerable malignant spirits; civilized man lives in fear of invisible and imaginary accidents. For every real foe that has to be faced we fight out hypothetical battles with a dozen shadows.

Worry is a matter of outlook and habit. It depends, first of all, on whether you are going to take all the facts into account and look on life as a whole, or see only

THE DISMAL POSSIBILITIES.

Then it depends on whether you will yield continually to the blue-moods that may arise from apprehension or from indigestion until you have become color blind to all but the blue things.

How trivial are the things over which we worry, by means of which we cultivate the enervating habit of worry, whether it will ruin when we want it to shine, or shine when we want it to rain.

How ineffective it all is! Whoever by worrying all night succeeded in bringing about the kind of weather he wanted? More than that, it is fatal to successfully accomplishing those things that do lie within our power. The worry over catching a train or doing a piece of work so agitates the mind and unsettles the will that it reduces the chances of efficiency.

But there are larger causes of worry than these, sickness, loss, impending disasters. Yet how futile to help and how potent to increase these ills is worry. The darkest days and the deepest sorrows need that we should be at our wits' end to meet them. To yield to fear and fretting is to turn the powers of heart and brain from allies to enemies.

No occasion is so great or so small that we can afford to meet it either with fear or without forethought. The imperative obligation to make the most of our lives is not met by apprehending the worst, but by doing the best we can. We have no right to give to forebodings the time and force we need for preparing for and actually

MEETING OUR DUTIES.

The best cure for worry is work. In the larger number of instances if we but do our work well we shall have no need to worry over the results. Much of our fearful frettings is but a confession of work ill done and the apprehension of deserved consequences.

Then faithful work by absorbing the thought and energies cures the habit of worry. It is the empty mind that falls first prey to foreboding, and is most easily filled with the spectres of woe. Do your work with all your might; let it go at that, knowing that no amount of further thought can affect the issue of it.

No matter how dark the way, how empty the scrip, the cheerful heart has sunshine and feasting. And this not by a blind indifference, a childish optimism, but by the blessed faculty of finding the riches that are by every way-side, of catching at all the good there is in living. If you would dispel your gloom and depreciate your burdens, begin to appreciate your blessings. Do your best, seek out the best, believe in the best, and the best shall be.

HENRY F. COPE.

Asylum. The Right of.—Our English word "asylum" comes from a Greek word meaning "inviolable." Its original meaning was that of an inviolable place of refuge and protection for slaves, debtors, political offenders, and criminals. The right of asylum was one of the earliest social rights recognized among primitive people. It is found to-day among very low tribes in Australia and elsewhere, but reached its highest development among the ancient Hebrews and Greeks. It was only gradually superseded by modern jurisprudence, and survived in a modified form even among Christian nations of Europe, until a late date. Usually the place set apart was an altar, sanctuary, or other sacred spot protected by the presence of some deity or other supernatural being and sharing its inviolability. 4. Verses 4-6 are not found in the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament dating from about the third century, B. C. The detailed provisions which these verses contain thus apparently belong to a later period of legislation, having been inserted at this point for the sake of completeness by the writer or writers who arranged the narrative of Joshua in its present form.

At the entrance of the gate of that city—Before the fugitive could be accorded the protection of the city he was to be solemnly tried before the local magistrate of the place.

6. Until the death of the high priest—the office and person of the high priest were regarded as of such importance that when he died the death of every other person was, so to speak, forgotten, and a general pardon was granted to all guilty of accidental manslaughter during his lifetime.

7. Set apart—Hebrew, "sanctify." It has often been pointed out in our lesson explanations that the verb "to sanctify," used in the Old Testament, means, literally, "to set apart," that is, for some special sacred purpose. We have here an illustration of that use of the verb in its original sense.

Kedesh in Gadilee—The most northern of the western cities. Sometimes called Kishion (comp. 21, 28).

Shechem—The central city west of the Jordan, located in the valley between Ebal and Gerizim, in the territory of Ephraim.

BRITISH OFFICER DIES A PAUPER AFTER ROMANTIC LIFE.

After a Sumptuous Life in the Orient,
His Fortune Overtook Him and Never Let Go.

Once commander-in-chief of the forces of Burmah, Burmese secretary of state for foreign affairs, and English gentleman by birth and education, one more man with a past has just ended his days at the Enfield (England) poorhouse. It is the old story of how greatness comes to nothing, and nobody knows why.

Major Robert Adeane Barlow was the grandson of . . . Sir Robert Barlow and General Robert Adeane, member of Parliament for Cambridgeshire and an equerry of King George IV.—that was what he came from. Rugby school, under the famous Dr. Arnold, and Saint John's College, Cambridge, where he was a classmate of Lord Derby and Sir William Harcourt—that was what he went to.

After college he set out for Brazil to manage a big business concern at Rio de Janeiro. In six years he was back in England again, only to be sent off to India and Ceylon to persuade the mandarins to allow the opening of a railroad through Burmah to China. When he got as far as Burmah, the King took a great fancy to him—so great a fancy that he made him commander-in-chief of his

ARMY OF 12,000 MEN.

Then the major suddenly became the great man of Burmah. He was made secretary of state for foreign affairs, he was given a gorgeous palace to live in, fitted up with all the splendors of the East, he was given two elephants to take turns carrying him, and his position demanded that three gold umbrellas should be carried before him whenever he went forth in state.

The King offered him also the felicity of 500 wives, an offer which the major was always careful to mention that he refused. He was the first man, the King said, who had ever been so silly. But he did take a salary of $20,000 a year, and he was commissioned to value the royal treasury, which he assessed at $10,000,000.

But the major soon got tired of this particular splendor and sought fresh fields. So he moved away, and before he knew it he was major-general in the Abyssinian army. Then he was captured and imprisoned in Egypt, and his case was the subject of questions in the House of Commons.

That was in the 70s. In 1880 he went home to the little English village of Enfield, where the poet Keats once lived. He asked permission to go out with General Gordon to Khartoum, but the general refused. That was the beginning of all his troubles. Everything went wrong after that. His family died, and at last in 1895 he entered the shelter of the poorhouse, which he never left, except to drive with old friends.

HIS MONEY DISAPPEARED,

To the master of the poorhouse, who knew something of his amazing career, he was always a polished, courteous old man, who rarely referred to his past, but whose education, manners and breeding told their own story. His chief recreations were backgammon and chess. He never gave the slightest trouble, never grumbled or seemed discontented. On special nights he used to wear some order on his coat, which he called the Star of India.

Two pictures he always carried in his pocket, one a portrait of himself, seated on a white elephant in full state regalia, the other of a handsome woman, whom he spoke of as his daughter who, he said, had married a prince of the house of Bonaparte.

Brought to Book

I had just reached my office after lunch one miserably wet day last November, when a visitor was announced. "Mr. Engstrom" was inscribed on the card—a name quite unknown to me. "Mr. De Warre?" said my visitor, a shrewd-looking, well-groomed man, who apparently had not yet touched forty.

"That is my name," I answered. "Please take a seat, and tell me what I can do for you."

"I am in great trouble," said Mr. Engstrom. "We had burglars at our house at Lyndhurst, in the New Forest, the night before last. They broke in while we were at dinner, and several thousand pounds' worth of jewels are gone from my wife's bedroom. But what distresses us most is that a valuable heirloom—a pearl necklace of great value, that has been in our family for two hundred years—is among the plunder. The other jewellery we could bear to lose, but not this. To tell you the truth," he added, with a smile, "I must own to being a little superstitious, and there is a legend in our family that this necklace was a gift to an ancestress of mine by Charles II., and whoever should lose it, his days would be very short and full of evil. It is said it was lost about the beginning of last century, and the legend came true. My wife is more superstitious than myself, and I am afraid, if it is not recovered, it may seriously affect her health. Of course, the police have been at work, but I have not very great confidence in them, and up to the present they have discovered nothing. If you can aid me I shall be very glad."

"I am willing to try, Mr. Engstrom, but perhaps you will give me some account of the affair?"

"I had better begin by giving you particulars of myself and family, I suppose?"

"Yes, if you please; it is hard to say what may, and what may not, throw light on the matter."

"I am," said Mr. Engstrom, "the descendant of an old family, who have lived in Hampshire for generations. We are not as wealthy as once we were, and I find employment for my time by being on the board of directors of several companies. I have only been married a short time—not quite a year—and we have been living very quietly. On Tuesday night, when the burglary occurred, there were only five of us at dinner. Besides my wife and myself were the rector and his wife and Captain Olyer (the son of an old friend), whom I lately met in the City and invited down. He has been with us over a week, and leaves to join his regiment on Saturday.

"We had just reached dessert, and Captain Olyer was inquiring of the butler if Wisden (his man-servant) had returned from London, when my wife's maid came in gasping, 'Oh, ma'am, your jewels is gone—robbers!' and sank fainting on the floor.

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed, and we sprang up.

"Let us search-out of doors at once," said the captain. "Bring us a light, John," he said to the butler, and rushed out. We followed him.

"It was quite dark, and we had not gone a dozen steps before he fell down. 'Look out!' he cried, 'the brutes have laid wires. They have caught one fool at any rate,' he remarked, as he got up. I went back for the light, and sure enough there were wires round that side of the house.

"The captain was holding his nose. He was but little hurt, he said, for, luckily, he had fallen on the grass. At the captain's suggestion I summoned and elsewhere, but reached its highest development among the ancient Hebrews and Greeks. It was only gradually superseded by modern jurisprudence, and survived in a modified form even among Christian nations of Europe until a late date. Usually the place set apart was an altar, sanctuary, or other sacred spot protected by the presence of some deity or other supernatural being and sharing its inviolability. Even wild animals that chanced to stray within the bounds of the sacred precincts shared its protection, and could not be put to death while they remained there. The right of asylum was of especial importance with those peoples among whom the primitive law of blood vengeance was most persistently maintained. In Israel the custom seems to have existed from earliest times, and, doubtless, at first every shrine and sanctuary was such an asylum. The canonical legislation regarding cities of refuge found in Deut. 19 and Josh. 20, however, belong, at least in part, to a later period of Hebrew history. From this original meaning of the word "asylum" the sense of the word was gradually enlarged until the word came to mean any secure place of refuge, retreat, or protection. Since in modern times Christian nations provide shelter and support to various unfortunate and afflicted classes of humanity in benevolent institutions, specially erected for that purpose, and since the custom of personal revenge has given way among enlightened peoples to a well-organized system of judicial procedure, the word "asylum" has come to be applied almost exclusively to institutions such as have just been referred to. It is of interest historically to have discovered the relation of this word to the ancient Hebrew institution of the cities of refuge.

Verse 1. The chapter intervening between this and our last lesson gave an account of the distribution of the land of Canaan among the different tribes. The writer of the narrative speaks of this distribution as having been completed in Joshua's time, though from the narratives of the book of Judges it is evident that the conquest was not completed, and for all that was rather achieved very gradually during a long period of years. The account before us presupposes a well-established order of things, which made it possible to assign to the tribes a great number of special tracts of residence (comp. Josh. 21). This portion of the book was, therefore, belongs to a later period of Hebrew history.

2. Cities of Refuge. Made necessary by the peculiar conditions of the criminal law among the ancient Hebrews, which laid upon the person guilty of homicide the duty of avenging the relative's death. This custom of blood revenge, which still exists in some parts of the world among peoples in an early stage of social development, rests ultimately upon two fundamental principles, namely, the satisfaction of human blood thirst, and the satisfaction of family, clan or tribe in the more civilized nations, the safeguarding of the rights of the community, thus passed on to the hands of individuals to the state, and hence among civilized nations the custom of blood revenge has become obsolete.

Whereof I spoke unto you. For the earlier communities referred to, compare Num. 31: 6-31; Deut. 1: 11; 19: 2. The entire narrative in Joshua seems to presuppose the existence of the Pentateuch, including Deuteronomy.

3. Manslayer. Distinguished from the murderer as one that kills any person unwittingly, that is, accidentally.

May the father go to escape from the avenger of blood, or go, as this person was known in Hebrew law. The duties of a God included more than the avenging of the death of a near relative. Under the civil law it became the duty of this person under certain circumstances, to redeem by purchase that which his brother had sold (ex. 21: 2-11), and sometimes also to redeem not only the property but the person of his kinsman, in the event of the latter being compelled by poverty to sell himself into slavery to a foreigner (Lev. 25: 47-49). On the other hand, an obligation or debt due the deceased became payable to the used in the last testament, means, literally, "to set apart," that is, for some special sacred purpose. We have here an illustration of that use of the verb in its original sense.

Kedesh in Galilee—The most northern of the western cities. Sometimes called Kishion (comp. 24: 28).

Shechem—The central city west of the Jordan, located in the valley between Ephraim and Gerizim, in the territory of Ephraim.

Kiriath-arba—Or, Hebron, the southernmost of the three western cities (comp. Research and Bible Study, Department, October Sunday-School Journal).

8. Bezer—East of the Jordan in the same latitude as Jericho. Probably not far from Heshbon (comp. Deut. 4: 43).

Ramoth in Gilead—Also called, Ramoth-mizpeh (Josh. 13: 26). This town was one of the great fortresses on the east of the Jordan. It is supposed to be the spot where Jacob made his covenant with Laban (Gen. 31: 43-53). It is mentioned several times in the books of Kings (1 Kings 6: 13; 15: 17-22; 2 Kings 9: 14).

Golan in Bashan—Most northerly of the cities east of the Jordan. It was once a place of great importance, its name still surviving in the modern Jaulan, the name of the surrounding district. This district was once densely populated, but is now almost a desert, the ancient site of the city having disappeared.

9. For the stranger that sojourneth among them—Referring to the class of "naturalized foreigners" in Israel. Their presence among the people is accounted for in several ways. Doubtless the "mixed multitude" that came with Israel out of Egypt (Exod. 12: 38) formed one element, while unconquered Canaanites and other native inhabitants of the land formed another. It is possible also that foreign captives, fugitives, hired servants, and merchants were included.

Whosoever killeth any person—In later times the law required that the roads leading to the cities of refuge be kept in thorough repair and free from obstructions; also, that at every turning point in the road guideposts bearing the word "refuge" be erected to assist the unfortunate manslayer in his flight to safety.

DOGS WITH WOODEN LEGS.

Dumb Animals Often Supplied With Artificial Limbs.

Walking along a country lane at Stapleford Abbots, Hertfordshire, England, a correspondent met a large sheep dog with a wooden leg. The animal was apparently suffering no inconvenience.

Accompanying the dog were two ladies, and they explained that the animal, whose name is "Bois," met with an accident about four years ago, his paw being shut in a door by some children. The wound was treated and apparently healed, but subsequently it got worse and it became necessary a little while ago to amputate the leg. "Bois" has become quite accustomed to his new limb, made by Messrs. Arnold and Sons, of West Smithfield, and now capers about almost as well as ever.

"This is not the first artificial limb that we have made for dumb animals by any means," said the manager of the Smithfield firm yesterday to a representative of the London Daily Mail. "Only the other day we made a wooden fore-leg for the dog of a well-known London journalist, and just before then a wooden hind-leg for a celebrated Alderney cow that it was desirable should be kept for breeding purposes."

"Not a week passes without a pet dog or cat being brought to us for the insertion of a glass eye, and for a time we had in our care a racehorse belonging to Mr. McCabmont, which, having pulled its shoulder out of joint, had to live for a time with the limb in a plaster cast until the tissues had regained their normal strength and the animal could walk without artificial aid."

DRINK GRIPS WOMEN HARD.

German Doctors Urge Government to Look After Drinkers.

Attention has again been directed to the constantly increasing intemperance among German women; especially those of the educated classes.

Authoritative statistics show that not less than 10 per cent. of alcoholics in Germany are women, and of recent years the ratio has tended to increase. Yet there is no public institution in the empire for their special treatment, although many appeals have been made by medical practitioners to the authorities to deal with the evil.

The Society of the Blue Cross, the Home Missions Society and the Salvation Army have tried to cope with the evil, and have been in some measure successful. Their exertions, however, are confined to the working classes.

Doctors in Berlin contend that women drinkers, to whatever class of society they belong, are more difficult to cure than men, and when, as is often the case, the taking of intoxicants to stave off attacks of epilepsy has gradually transformed the woman into a habitual drinker, she is regarded as incurable.

So-called patent medicines for the drink habit are regarded by German medical men as useless. Their sale and use was made illegal after October 1.

The most generally accepted method of dealing with the patients and the one which it is hoped the authorities will adopt, is to confine them in small home-like institutions, where, leading a quiet, well-regulated family life, they will be under strict supervision. The principle universally in favor among doctors here is that the patient must undergo an immediate and absolute deprivation of alcohol, a system which, although it entails at first a severe trial for the victim, has been proved to be quickly effective.

Leading physicians have so far recognized the dangers of the use of alcohol in their practice that in many of the great public hospitals of Berlin, including those of Schöneberg, Steglitz and Wessend, and the Hospital for Nervous Diseases at Schoenow, not a drop of alcohol ever enters the doors, efficient substitutes have been found.

A FATHER'S REVENGE.

Robbed a Bank Which Prosecuted His Son.

On the eve of the trial of Loyson, the venerable cashier of the Bank of Brussels, Belgium, the prisoner has written a remarkable letter to Eloi Belge explaining his conduct. It appears that he extracted the money in order to avenge his son, whom the bank persisted in prosecuting for earlier delinquencies. Two weeks after the theft the aged man gave himself up, but declared that the money he had taken had been sent to America. "I would rather have burned it," he declared, "than let the bank have it back." Here is his letter:

"I have just read the account of the theft in the Banque de Bruxelles in your paper. I am the author of it. Sir, I have with serious intentions acted in revenge. These are the true facts."

"I denounced my son; but had I imagined that the bank would act in such a manner, I would never have done it. My son occupied a position in the bank for which he received $13.75 per month, and I was far from supposing that he could commit any embezzlements. Therefore, I immediately informed the bank when I had proofs of my son's guilt. Nobody had noticed anything; but, instead of taking into consideration the services of a loyal old servant, they prosecuted my son."

gone a dozen steps before he fell down. 'Look out!' he cried, 'the brutes have laid wires. They have caught one foot at any rate,' he remarked, 'as he got up. I went back for the light, and sure enough there were wires round that side of the house.'

"The captain was holding his nose. He was but little hurt, he said, for, luckily, he had fallen on the grass. At the captain's suggestion I summoned two men-servants."

"One of you ride to the station," he said, "and have any suspicious stranger stopped; and ask them to telegraph to the stations each way. And you, to the other, go for the police, quick. Meanwhile, if you have a lantern, Mr. Engstrom, we will search the neighborhood."

"I found a lantern, and we searched the grounds and the surrounding roads. We found nothing, save a ladder under one of the windows, and a small brooch the thief had dropped. No suspicious-looking person had been seen in the village or at the station, and the two policemen who came could do nothing beyond looking wise. I called at the police-station this morning, but they have no clue, nor is it likely they will have one. All I have learnt from them is that they believe that two were engaged in the affair, from the foot-marks."

"It will be too dark by the time we could reach Lyndhurst to investigate," I said, "but I will come on by the first train in the morning."

"The train from Waterloo reaches Lyndhurst at 10.15. If you come by that I will meet you at the station," said Mr. Engstrom. "It is about two miles from my house—the 'Beeches.'"

"I wish you to promise me one thing, not to mention to anyone the object of my visit. Call me a fellow-director or anything you like."

I found Mr. Engstrom at the station the next morning with a dog-cart. I refused to talk on the object of my visit, save to ask one question:

"Why did you keep such a valuable necklace at home, Mr. Engstrom?"

"I keep it in the Safe Deposit in Chancery Lane," he answered, "and only brought it home last Saturday because my wife wanted it at the County Ball to-morrow night."

I had some lunch and a pleasant chat with my host and hostess, after which I asked permission to interview the servant.

Unless I was greatly at fault in the present instance, the servants had nothing to do with the robbery. They gave me all the information they could, and spoke with genuine sorrow of the loss their employers had sustained, whom they evidently respected highly.

"Are your visitors in?" I asked Mr. Engstrom.

"Captain Oyer is rabbit-shooting with the rector, but he will be in to dinner."

"Oh, I merely wanted to have his account of what happened. Now, would you be so kind as to have the wires arranged round the house in the exact place the burglars left them?"

The gardener who had taken them up brought them again. It was fine but strong wire, fastened to the ground by small iron pegs.

"Are the wires in the exact place?"

"I put the pegs in the very holes, sir," replied the gardener. "You can see the holes, yourself, sir."

"And now I should be glad to be left alone a little," I said. "I want to make some minute investigations."

My wish was complied with, and I went down on my hands and knees to examine.

I was well satisfied. In a few minutes I had made an important discovery.

I next examined the window where the burglars had entered from the outside, and then entering the house I went upstairs, and, with the help of the maid, examined the bedroom. The window had been left half open, the maid said, as "master was so particular about fresh air." Next I inspected the footstep, a matter of some difficulty, considering the number of people who had been there since. The

Finally, I traced them across a flower bed into the shrubbery, where they were quite distinct. Only one person had passed there, and I came to the conclusion the sapient police had evolved two robbers from their inner consciousness. But what interested me more was, that the palings which separated the shrubbery from the public byway had lately been tarred, and were not yet dry. The robber had climbed over the palings and, whoever he was, he must have carried away a little of the tar on his person. In fact, the marks of his fingers were quite distinct.

I felt tolerably satisfied, and having walked to the post-office and sent a telegram, I strolled round the village till the reply came. It was then four o'clock and as dinner was not until six I took a longer walk through the forest.

On getting back I had a pleasant half-hour in the billiard-room with Mr. Engstrom.

Captain Olyer returned just in time for dinner, and I was only introduced to him as we entered the dining-room. He was faultlessly got up, of well-made figure, and handsome features bearing large traces of dissipation. As for his speech, he had an invincible objection to the letter "r," and carefully avoided its use.

We had finished soup, when I begged a thousand pardons for leaving the table for a few minutes. My host looked a little surprised at my want of manners, and the captain surveyed me through his eye-glass as though I were a new kind of animal. I was only gone a few minutes, but it was time well spent.

When we reached dessert and Mrs. Engstrom had left the table, I led the conversation round to the burglary, and induced the captain to give his version. I waited till he had finished, and then, looking at him steadily, said:—

"Now, isn't it rather a curious thing, Captain Olyer, that you should fall over the wires when they were quite three feet away?"

Engstrom stared at me, and the captain did not answer till he had drunk a glass of wine.

"What do you mean, sir?" he asked at last.

"I mean," I replied, still watching him keenly, "was it not a curious thing that you should be tripped up by blades of grass? . . . And is it not curious also?" I went on, mercilessly, "that your servant, or rather your accomplice, should be standing under the bedroom window here at the same time that he was in London?"

The captain sat dazed and motionless, though his hands trembled, and Mr. Engstrom gasped dull. "Mr. De Warre, whatever are you suggesting?"

"I suggest," I answered, as steadily as before, "that the burglar is sitting before you."

"Sir," thundered Mr. Engstrom, pale with emotion, "you are forgetting yourself. To accuse my old friend's son of being a thief! Preposterous!"

"This is not your old friend's son, Mr. Engstrom. Captain Olyer of the 38th Hussars is at present with his regiment at Woolwich, and replied to me to-day. Here is the telegram:—

"Captain Olyer to De Warre.—Am here. What is the meaning of this inquiry?"

The pseudo-captain had risen, and looked round as if seeking means of escape.

"Sit down," cried Engstrom, "and if you want to save yourself from jail make a full confession. De Warre, I beg your pardon."

"Don't trouble about that," I said; "of course, it was hard to credit it."

The poor wretch sat down again and stammered out his story. His name turned out to be Odgers, an ex-sergeant in the Hussars, expelled from the Army in disgrace. His accomplice, who acted as his servant, had hidden the jewels in the wood, near the house, but they could safely be removed.

At breakfast-time the next morning I had to relate how I had unearthed the conspiracy.

HOME.

SOME DAINTY DISHES.

Cheese Sandwiches.—One-quarter pound of rich cheese grated; three yolks of hard boiled eggs; rub to paste, add one tablespoonful melted butter; salt, pepper, and mustard to taste; lastly add grated cheese.

Marshmallow Pudding.—Lay slices of angel food cake on small plates. Spread over a mixture made of one pound marshmallows cut in small pieces and a little milk. Set over a slow fire to melt. Whip cream, to which add vanilla to taste. Spread this on marshmallows, then another layer of cake and marshmallows, and finish with cream. Set aside for one hour before serving.

Potato Balls.—Mix some mashed potato with the yolk of an egg, roll the substance out into balls. Have the potato mixture seasoned nicely with chopped parsley, a little mace, pepper and salt. Dip the balls into beaten egg, then in breadcrumbs and fry in deep, boiling fat till a nice golden color.

Sausages.—Take three pounds of pork, fat and lean, cut into small pieces, season with a tablespoonful and a half of powdered sage, half an ounce of pepper. Mix all well together and then press the meat through some well-cleaned skins with a sausage machine, and twist into lengths required.

Apple Mould.—This may be made easily from the small apples which fall off the trees so plentifully just now. Peel, core, and cut into halves some cooking-apples, stew them with one-third of their weight in sugar, the juice and rind of a lemon, and a small piece of cinnamon. Stew all gently till quite firm and clear and pour into a flat mould with a hole in the centre. Turn out when set, stick with a few blanched almonds, and pile a little whipped cream in the middle.

Cheese Souffle.—Take a tencupful of grated cheese, with the same quantity each of milk and breadcrumbs, two eggs, a small piece of butter and cayenne pepper to taste. First divide the yolks and whites of eggs, beat the yolks to a light color. Put the cheese, breadcrumbs, and milk in a stewpan, and gradually make all hot, stir and add cayenne to taste. Grease a pie-dish. When the bread mixture is cooked a little, add the yolks of eggs and the butter, and put into the dish. Add the stiffly beaten whites of eggs lightly put into a sharp oven once and bake for twenty minutes.

Savory roll is a nice way of using up cold meat. Take the remains of a cold joint free from skin and fat and bone, and pass it through a mincing machine. Add a third of the quantity of breadcrumbs or potato. Flavor with minced onion, chopped sage, pepper and salt, and mix with a beaten egg, or two if a large roll be made. Flour the hands, and then form the meat into a neat roll, place it in a baking tin, with some pieces of dripping on it, and bake for half an hour, basting well all the time. To serve, put the roll on a hot dish, and pour a little thick gravy round, garnish with heaps of chopped carrot.

To Cook Tongue.—Place it in a saucepan, cover with tepid water, add a seasoning of herbs and whole spices. Bring to the boil and simmer very slowly for two and a half to three and a half hours, according to weight. When cooked remove the skin, brush the entire surface with beaten eggs, and stew with breadcrumbs. Bake for half an hour in a steady oven, basting frequently. Serve hot with brown gravy. Boiled potatoes and a green vegetable should accompany this dish.

Saigon Croquettes.—Make a sauce of three level teaspoonfuls of butter. When melted stir into it one-third cup of flour and when thoroughly mixed turn in

SAW NAPOLEON'S DISASTROUS TREAT FROM MOSCOW.

Rabbi Wolinsky Subalists Principally on Tea and Tobacco, Smoking All Day.

One hundred and five years old, Rabbi Barnett Wolinsky, who on Sunday night at his great-granddaughter's marriage in New York danced the wild steps of two Russian dances, performed this feat despite a lameness which compels him to wear one shoe with a sole an inch thicker than that of the other.

His eyes, that watched Napoleon's broken legions straggle westward again in the Russian snows ninety-five years ago, shone as brightly on fifty-four of Rabbi Wolinsky's descendants on Sunday night. His legs, which carried him briskly in boyish panic from the French soldiers in 1812, twinkled almost as merrily in Forsyth Street, New York, in 1907, as he pranced with his great-grandchildren in the Zeide mit die Einiklach, and later broke into the wild rhythm of the Komarishki.

The only thing that tired Rabbi Wolinsky on Sunday night was the length of time he had to go without his pipe. He smokes before he gets up, he smokes all day and he smokes after he goes to bed. He had plenty of tea at the wedding, where he performed his remarkable terpsichorean feats, however, and he needed it, for his daily quota is brewed strong and taken without milk. He drinks no water and no liquor as a rule, though he takes both in times of emergency. One meal daily, consisting of soup, bread, and a little meat, is his only food, and is set for him at noon.

Sharp eyed, vigorous, mentally active, learned in the Talmud and all the sacred writings, master of seven languages, wise as the prophets, Rabbi Wolinsky, though no longer practicing any rabbinical duties, except the performance of marriages, is the spiritual father of thousands of his faith. He is the Moses of a great faction of his people in New York, and his decisions draw acclaim for their shrewdness even from those who find defeat in his judgments.

Born in Kobrine, in the state of Grodno, Russian Poland, he moved about with his parents in his early youth and so came to see the ice-beaten regiments of the Little Corporal falling back from Moscow. Marrying early he settled in Antipole and traded in liquors most of his life in Russia being spent in the wholesale liquor business. He prospered and twelve children came to him and his first wife, who died before he left his Russian home for America, about twenty-five years ago, with two of his sons, the first of his family to seek these shores.

WOLINSKY'S BUSINESS RUIN

In Antipole began when Alexander II. was assassinated in 1881. Alexander III., who was by nature inclined to mild measures, fell under the influence of the leaders of the old regime and in a period of repression which the activity of the revolutionaries seemed to demand the Russian soldiery were more aggressive than ever.

Cossacks broke into Wolinsky's establishment in 1881, drank all they could swallow, and opened every barrel in his well-stocked cellar. When they went on their way he was ruined. He at once determined to leave the country.

In the east side of New York he was immediately recognized as a person of extraordinary learning, and he was elected rabbi of the Eldridge Street Synagogue, which place he held for many years, retiring only two years ago upon the death of his second wife. He removed at that time to the residence of a son, who lives at No. 238 Thalford Avenue, East New York, and now lives there.

Wolinsky's second wife was twenty-two years old when, at the age of sixty-five he married her. They had fifteen children. He has ninety-two living direct descendants, of whom fifty-four are in New York City or State or in New

FRUIT TREE PRUNING.

For some time past several English horticultural journals have furnished interesting matter as to the respective merits of the pruning and non-pruning of fruit-trees. The evidence in some cases discloses strong proofs that the common custom of annual pruning, and that often of a severe nature, is altogether a mistake.

A contributor to the "Gardeners' Chronicle," a grower of fruit trees, especially apples of the best English, French and Russian varieties, states that long since he has arrived at the conclusion that if quantity combined with quality are the desired objects, regular pruning as practised by most gardeners is a mistake. He admits that thinning is necessary every few years, that long branches should be shortened, and that cross, awkward growths should be taken out, but the annual pruning that one sees in most gardens is wrong. Time spent in cleansing the trees from American blight, manuring, etc., is much more profitably employed. Many sorts have not failed to crop for at least twenty years, and some seasons very heavily.

Mr. J. Udale reports on experiments of pruning and non-pruning, the difference, he says, between pruned and unpruned plum trees being nearly 100 per cent. Williams' Bon Chretien pears also showed a great difference. Lane's Prince Albert apples showed the least difference, but still it was clearly defined. The trees of each kind of fruit only slightly pruned exhibited intermediate effects. These experiments annually increase in value and interest. Some details are as follows:

Eleven trees of apples, Prince Albert, are growing under equal conditions in all respects except in regard to pruning. Five trees in one row have been annually and carefully pruned. Three trees in the next row have been annually and badly (or roughly) pruned, and three trees in the same row have not been pruned. All the trees came from the same source, and from the same parcel of trees, and were planted on the same day. Each tree has produced more or less fruit every year, since 1880 to 1906, inclusive, and the average weight per tree for the whole of that period is: Three badly-pruned trees yielded 199.0 pounds of fruit per tree; three non-pruned trees, 183.6 pounds of fruit per tree; five well-pruned trees, 105 pounds of fruit per tree.

In order that readers may understand the size and market value, as well as the economic value of the fruit, 88 pounds of the largest apples were selected from each stored sample, and the following, after careful counting, was the result: Seventy apples from the well-pruned trees weighed 28 pounds, 125 apples from the badly pruned trees weighed 28 pounds. When sold, the fruit from the well-pruned trees realized from $2.10 to $2.50 per cwt., that from the badly-pruned trees $1.45 per cwt., and fruit from non-pruned trees $1.20 per cwt.

It is thus shown that the non-pruned and badly-pruned trees have up-to-date produced nearly double the quantity of fruit produced by the well-pruned; it is also shown that the latter have produced fruit nearly twice the value of the former, which makes them about equal in value (commercially) up to the end of 1906. The future will prove which system of management is the best of the three; but to predict future events by the past is not very difficult, and, judging by the progress made by the well-pruned trees, the result in the near future is almost a foregone conclusion in favor of good pruning.

Much more may be said about this much-disputed question of the benefits arising from good pruning as against slight or non-pruning. The great bulk stammered out his story. His name turned out to be Odgers, an ex-sergeant in the Hussars, expelled from the Army in disgrace. His accomplice, who acted as his servant, had hidden the jewels in the wood near the house, but they could safely be removed.

At breakfast-time the next morning I had to relate how I had unearthed the conspiracy.

"First of all," I said, "the fact that the burglary occurred shortly after you had brought the jewelry from London convinced me that the thief was someone in the house. And when I had the wires relaid and found that the captain had fallen three feet away from them—a fact which I discovered from the impression made by his knees and the toes of his boots—I thought things very suspicious against him. Upstairs I found that it was little trouble for him to slip into your wife's room and throw the casket down as soon as she left it there. I learnt that he had been the last to appear at the dinner-table and the case was strengthened. At the railway station I discovered that a man answering to the description of his 'servant' had arrived from London by the 5.30 train, and not by the 9.15 as it was made to appear. What effect the telegram had you already know. In tracing the footprints through the scrubbery I found that whoever had passed over the palings must have carried away some of the tar on his clothing. At dinner last night I seized my only opportunity and examined his man's overcoat and a pair of trousers. The tar was there, and he had evidently tried to remove it. That is all, I think."—London Tit-Bits.

QUICKSANDS ENGULFED HIM.

Gardener Underwent Tortures of Slow Death in Morecambe Sands.

Slow death in one of its most agonizing forms was the fate of a man named John Williamson, the gardener at Pilling Vicarage near Fleetwood, Lancashire, England, who was found carried up to the waist in the dreaded Morecambe sands. These consist of an immense extent of sand and mud stretching along the Lancashire shores of the Irish Sea, and are uncovered at low tide.

Williamson's body was discovered after he had been three days missing. A miller found it about half a mile from the Board Sand. His legs were fast in the quick-sands up to the waist, and his body had fallen a little forward.

The miller could not get to the deceased on account of the quicksand and the rising tide. He summoned assistance, and eventually the body was recovered on the going down of the tide. Williamson's cap was in his pocket, but otherwise he was fully dressed.

The recovery of the body occupied three and a half hours, and great difficulty was experienced in extricating it.

The deceased was firmly embedded in the mud and sand, and even when ropes were fastened round his arms, the middle of the body and the legs, it was found impossible to move it, and sticks and crowbars had to be requisitioned by a number of men standing on ladders and planks.

Williamson was known to have gone for a walk on the sands after finishing his work at the vicarage. It was very foggy, and it is presumed that he lost his way, walked into the treacherous ooze, and, despite his frantic struggles, sank steadily.

Far away from human habitation and the track of traffic of any sort, his cries for help were unheard. He'd as in a vice, the doomed man must have watched the slowly rising tide until inch by inch and minute by minute it crept up and at last mercifully engulfed him.

Marriage is never a failure, but often the contracting parties are.

are surface with beaten eggs, and stew with breadcrumbs. Bake for half an hour in a steady oven, basting frequently. Serve hot with brown gravy. Boiled potatoes and a green vegetable should accompany this dish.

Salmon Croquettes.—Make a sauce of three level teaspoonfuls of butter. When melted stir into it one-third cup of flour and when thoroughly mixed turn in slowly one cupful of warm milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of pepper. When creamy add one pint of flaked cooked salmon and one tablespoonful of lemon juice; spread an inch thick on buttered plates and when cold form into croquettes, using one tablespoonful for each croquette. Roll in beaten egg yolk and fine bread crumbs; fry in hot fat until brown; drain on brown paper and keep hot until ready to serve. Garnish the plate with sliced cucumbers dressed with vinegar and mustard.

HINTS FOR THE HOME.

Prunes are greatly improved by being stewed in a little cider.

To preserve fish sprinkle powdered borax over it lightly and place in a good situation.

Beeswax and salt will make rusty flat irons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot rub them first with the wax rag, then scour with a paper or cloth sprinkled with a little salt.

To keep palms in the house in a healthy condition you should sponge the leaves once a week with tepid water in which is a little milk. Then stand the pot quite covered in lukewarm water for two hours. Palms treated in this manner will live a long time.

Copper utensils may be brightened by the use of vinegar and salt or oxalic acid. Ordinary ironware may be scourged with finely-sifted coal ashes, and galvanized ironware may be wiped off with a cloth dipped in kerosene. This may be cleared with kerosene and sand, or rubbed with crumpled newspapers.

Teacups, even when carefully kept, sometimes have dark stains at the bottom, caused by the action of the tannin in the tea. Salt, slightly moistened, will remove these, but in the case of a very fine china sometimes scratches it a little. Powdered whiting will be found quite harmless and equally good.

To Pickle Cabbage.—Choose a fine close cabbage for the purpose of pickling. Cut it as thin as possible and throw some salt on it. Let all remain for three days when it should have turned a rich color; drain off the salt and put in a pan with some strong vinegar, a few blades of mace, and some white peppercorn. Give it a scald and when cold place in jars and make quite a tight. Always stand this pickle for a few days before using.

Pieces of soap should be saved, and not left to waste, by the kitchen sink. Put them in a jar, and when there are several pieces, shred them and put them into a saucepan, allowing a teacupful of soap to a quart of water. Add a dessertspoonful of borax, and boil till dissolved. Pour into jam pots, and keep the jelly for washing flannels and light things. The soap jelly is easily dissolved in hot water and in a bath made in this way the finest woollen goods can be washed.

TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

"How many children have you?" asked the census taker.

"Well," said the father of the large family, studying a moment, "there's John, Julia, Hiram and Samuel—them's twins—Lucy, James, William."

"I'm not asking their names, I only want to know how many there are in the family."

"Drat it!" irritably rejoined the father, "you ask me so kind of sudden like I disremember. I just got to name 'em misster, I jist got to name 'em, 'fore I can tell you how many there is."

His descendants have been increasing at a rate of twelve a year for two or three years. He knows the name of every one of them and never forgets their birthdays.

He rises every morning at four o'clock and has a few glasses of tea and a pipeful of Mohoke tobacco, imported from Russia, for breakfast. He uses three pipes, one for the street, one for the house and a third for smoking in bed. This last has a big bowl and a long stem, the bowl resting on the floor. He has never been ill, but eight years ago he was run down while crossing Canal Street by a fire chief's buggy. A wheel passed over his ankle, breaking the bones, and when it healed that leg was a trifle shorter than the other, making it necessary to wear on it a shoe with a very thick sole.

PHOENIX PARK HOME.

Beautiful Irish Home of Lord and Lady Aberdeen.

While there are two residences for the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Dublin Castle and Phoenix Park Lodge, the Aberdeens prefer the home in Phoenix Park, and only live at the Castle during the six weeks' social season preceding St. Patrick's Day. The view from the windows of Lady Aberdeen's study is superb, for it overlooks the valley in which Dublin lies, with a glimpse of the lovely hills on the other side, writes a correspondent.

It was at the lodge that Queen Victoria made her visit in 1900. I was shown into the small drawing rooms at the end of the suite of the reception rooms which the late Queen used as her private dining room. Opening off this room is a large drawing-room with Irish marble in old design, over one of two wide fireplaces of exquisite white which hangs a life-size painting of the late Queen, and over the other one of her consort, Prince Albert.

The most interesting room of all is Lady Aberdeen's boudoir. It is surely the room that a woman whose happiness consists in work would possess. There are great desks filled with letters and papers and book cases full of reports and books dealing with the movements in which she is interested. The general color tone of the room is green, with carpets and hangings in that restful color. There are no pictures on the walls, but a shelf runs about above a white dado on which are numerous water color drawings, mostly all of which have been bought at Irish exhibitions by the Vicereine. One of the few exceptions is a sketch of Cromar, the Aberdeen's Scottish retreat in Deeside, done by the Countess's niece, Miss Grace Ridley, whom I also met and who is a delightful young girl who has made her home with the Countess since the death of her parents.

SIGNS OF A HARD WINTER.

When the steamer Cassiar arrived at Vancouver recently she brought down from the north a number of Toba Indians, who are distinguished above all other Indians for their wisdom in weather lore. One of the red men, in conversation with another passenger said the Indians up coast expected a very severe winter, and had already begun to make preparations to secure themselves against cold. Forest animals, particularly the common wolf, they say, are growing longer hair than usual. This fact may reasonably enough be construed as pointing to a severe winter, but in the estimation of the Indians the testimony of wild animals is as nothing compared with the signs and warnings vouchsafed by the moon.

last of the three; but to predict future events by the past is not very difficult, and, judging by the progress made by the well-pruned trees, the result in the near future is almost a foregone conclusion in favor of good pruning.

Much more may be said about this much-disputed question of the benefits arising from good pruning as against slight or nonpruning. The great bulk will agree that good pruning is the best; but there are also other fruit growers, who say that regular annual prunings are a mistake.

FORM WITHOUT PERFORMANCE IS HUMBUG.

In this shrewd business age, we insist on breeding dairy cows for milk. Color of hair and skin, graceful turn or horn, perfection of symmetrical contour, and the numerous other facy considerations which, in the past, breeders have often sacrificed utility to obtain, are all very well in their ways but they do not pay wages, interest or rent for the everyday commercial farmer, who will see hardly the animals or their progeny must finally pass. Gradually the conviction has forced itself on unwilling minds that pure-bred dairy cattle, unless persistently selected and bred for constitution and performance, are bound to deteriorate to the point where their average usefulness will be no higher, and often actually lower than that of grades or scrubs. A higher level of utility, which is profitability, can be developed and maintained only by constant rational selection and breeding to that end.

Moreover, every wide-awake dairyman now knows that appearance, or so-called outward evidences, of dairy usefulness, though perhaps of some significance in a general way, are often as deceiving as sin. Good judges of dairy cattle may pick out some good cows, but the best of them cannot be depended on to discern all the best cows of a herd. Much less to rate their selections in order of proportionate value. This can be done only by careful, conscientious testing with the milk scales and Babcock test, applied for several successive milking periods; and until breed associations commence official testing on this thorough and exhaustive basis, we shall never be able to breed dairy cattle so intelligently as we should. But while this is the case, much good has been done by testing for shorter periods. Even a week's or a month's test is better than none, although very liable to exalt one's estimation of the cow that milks well when fresh and then drops off, as contrasted with the steady, persistent milker. Much can be done to guard against such injustice by retesting eight months after freshening, and taking the two tests in conjunction. Best of all, however, and by far the simplest method, is the careful keeping of a milk record throughout the year, and year after year, with occasional unannounced visits from an official inspector, who will watch several milkings, and compare the weights of milk with those recorded for previous days, to see whether they correspond, and will then take samples for Babcock tests, to determine the average percentage of fat. It is such work as this that the Dominion Department of Agriculture is carrying on, free of charge, for the Canadian dairy-breed associations, and no better line of effort was ever undertaken by a Department of Agriculture. It will be up to dairymen to acquaint themselves with the Records of Performance of the breeds in which they are individually interested, and, when buying heifer calves or young bulls, to insist on knowing the official milk and butter-fat records of their dams and grandams. Fortunately, there will score plenty of breeders of blooded stock ready and anxious to supply them. Fern in dairy cows is all right, so far as it goes, but without performance it is a humbug.

Give a little more than you promise, but don't promise too much.

BRITISH LION WAKES UP YOUNG ADULT PRISONERS TRAGEDIES OF A QUEEN THE GOTHENBERG SYSTEM

JOHN BULL IS STILL VERY MUCH ALIVE.

English Writer Brooks No Patronage of "Old Country"—Independent of Canada.

In certain parts of Middle Canada you fancy yourself in America, writes Harold Begbie in The London Daily Chronicle. The nose usurps the function of the mouth's roof. Cities are planned on American models. Newspapers are run on American lines. Spitcons are like the sands of the sea. Conversation turns only on dollars and wheat. There is a militant display of offensiveness on the part of a democracy persuaded that equality consists in telling other people to go to Avernus. "So live your life," runs a text, "that rising every morning from sleep you may go forth, look any man whatsoever in the eyes, and tell him to go to hades."

CANUCK'S "HOT AIR."

"Say," continued a Canadian young gentleman, who had been giving me the benefit of his patronage, "I heard Keir Hardie at Shearman's Auditorium last night. My, but he's a dandy. Sure thing! The man, he said, 'who asks you to wave a Union Jack in each hand and to sing Rule Britannia is picking both your pockets all the time.' Say, but that's dandy!"

"No considerable proportion of the British nation, so far as I am aware," I made answer, "is engaged in requesting people, either separately or simultaneously, to wave a Union Jack in each hand and to sing Rule Britannia."

"How?"

"Believe me we are living in England, and we are not emotional."

"Anyway we hear too much in our papers about the Old Country."

"My dear young gentleman," said I, taking him up, "I have heard ever since I set foot on Canadian soil too many plying and patronizing references to the 'Old Country.' I am not a fighting man, and I carry no more dangerous weapon than an ivory nail cleaner 'ex urgue leonem'—let me recommend the invention for importation—but if you will maintain a peaceful frame of mind and endeavor yourself not to fume at the mouth or draw a gun on me, I should like to tell you that my country, far from being old and outworn, is in the very flush and dawn of its manhood, that it is the greatest country in the world, that it has the pleasantest customs, the most agreeable manners, and infinitely the strongest arm of any other nation under the firmament."

CANADA NOT NECESSARY

"Further, I should like to tell you that without any country, the 'Old Country,' as you obligingly call it, your country could not exist for three agitations of a gopher's tail; and further, that if you were to cut the painter to-morrow it would not interrupt a single cricket match in England or cool a single bowl of porridge on the western slopes of our Scottish Highlands. If you will journey to British Columbia and engage yourself in conversation with the old timers, you will find that what I have told you is their own settled and well-reasoned conclusion. No, young gentleman, be calm and receptive. I will not brook an interruption. The Old Country is on its legs. The lion is roaring. Be so good as to chew gum, smiling as little as is possible to your convenience, until I have finished this exordium."

"Now, young gentleman, I wish you particularly to bear in mind the following considerations whenever you hear your staple people talking hot air about the Old Country. It is from our islands that we send every year, out of our schools and universities,

KILLING CRIME WHILE IT IS STILL IN ITS MILD AGE.

In England and Wales It Is Believed the Long Sentence for Juveniles Is the Best.

The remarkable success which has followed the adoption by the state of the principle of "cutting off the supply of crime at the source" forms the most striking feature of the annual report on the prisons of England and Wales.

The object has been achieved by the segregation of juvenile prisoners, young adults and first offenders from the older and irredeemable class of habitual criminals. Not only are these classes of prisoners segregated, but they are educated, and, as far as the terms of their sentences render possible, trained to become useful members of society.

The success of these efforts has been especially noticeable in regard to juvenile crime—that is to say, offences committed by persons under sixteen years of age. This diminution is described by the commissioners as "almost marvelous." Here are the figures for the last few years:

	Under 12 years.	Between 12 and 16
1897 .....	58	1,630
1904-5 .....	7	1,184
1905-6 .....	3	1,029

THE BORSTAL SYSTEM.

The reduction in the number of young adult prisoners—that is to say, those who are between sixteen and twenty-one years of age—has been equally satisfactory, numbering in all, nearly 2,000. This is ascribed to the working of the Borstal system, which was extended during the year in a modified form to all prisoners, whereas it had previously been in force only with regard to those under sentences of over a year.

First offenders during the year, who have been sent to prison have numbered 69,979, against 81,909 during 1905-6. It is satisfactory in this connection to note that there was also a reduction of nearly 300 in the number of prisoners who had on previous conviction against them. This seems to suggest that the treatment meted out to first offenders has resulted in fewer returning to gaol.

The commissioners again make a plea for longer sentences on juvenile offenders.

"We strongly endorse the opinion expressed by governors and chaplains throughout the service," they say "that in the case of the young and impressionable and imaginative a sentence which only familiarizes with what ought to be the great mystery and dread of a prison, and which does not admit of sufficient time for the application of any useful reformatory influence, must do more harm than good."

SHORT SENTENCE EVIL.

The chaplain-inspector, in dealing with this matter, says the opinion "is frequently expressed that a boy whose training and surroundings have been bad requires at least a year's imprisonment before he can be shaped for better things."

"A very experienced society thinks that short sentences in the case of youthful offenders is a great mistake, and that other methods of punishment should be found where the offence is of such a trivial character as to demand a sentence of less than a month. Judging from results, the boys with longer sentences turn out the best, the boys with shorter sentences being hardened, not reformed."

Generally speaking, there was a distinct improvement in regard to the crime of the country as shown in the number of prisoners. Here are some comparisons with the previous year:

QUEEN VICTORIA'S GRIEF AT DEATH OF THE PRINCE CONSORT.

Remarkable Volume Just Issued by the King — "Letters" of Queen Victoria."

The most remarkable state documents issued in a long time are contained in the volume of "Queen Victoria's Letters," edited by A. C. Benson and Lord Esher, and copyrighted by the King of Great Britain and the dependencies. Men of thought have said that where a man may conceal himself in his conversation, he cannot fail to reveal his true nature in his letters, and it is a rare if not an unknown opportunity this volume affords, that of piercing through the majesty that doth hedge a King, and seeing eye to eye with the greatest monarch of the world, in the personal matters of life, as revealed by her communications. The most touching of the letters made public so far betrays the acute grief of Queen Victoria at the death of the Prince Consort.

On the day after her marriage, February 11, 1838, the Queen wrote from Windsor Castle to her Uncle, King Leopold—

A HAPPY QUEEN

"Dearest Uncle,—I write you from here the happiest, happiest being that ever existed. Really I do not think it possible for anyone in the world to be happier or as happy as I am. He is an angel, and his kindness and affection for me is really touching. To look in those dear eyes and dear, sunny face is enough to make me adore him. What I can do to make him happy will be my greatest delight and independent of my great personal happiness."

"The reception we both met with yesterday was the most gratifying and enthusiastic I ever experienced. There was no end of crowds in London and all along the road."

THE YOUNG KING.

A letter written soon after the birth of the present King ran as follows:—

"Our little boy is a wonderfully strong and large child, with very large, blue eyes and finely formed, but with a somewhat large nose and pretty little mouth. I hope and pray he may be like his dearest papa. He is to be called Albert, and Edward is to be his second name."

In 1861 the Queen poured out her grief to the same relative. This heart-broken letter is as follows:—

"Osborne, Dec. 20, 1861.

"My own dearest, kindest father, for as such I have ever loved you. Your poor fatherless baby of eight months is now the utterly broken-hearted and crushed widow of forty-two. My life as a happy one is ended. The world is gone for me. If I must live on—and I will do nothing to make me worse than I am—it is henceforth for our poor fatherless children, for my unhappy country which has lost all in losing him, and in only doing what I know and feel he would wish, for he is near me, his spirit will guide and inspire me. But, oh, to be cut off in the prime of life, to see our pure, happy, quiet, domestic life, which alone enabled me to bear my much-disliked position, cut off at forty-two, when I had hoped with such instinctive certainty that God never would part us and would let us grow old together!"

WOULD WELCOME DEATH.

"Although he always talked of the shortness of life, it is too awful, too cruel, and yet it must be for his good, his happiness. His purity was too great, his aspiration too high for this poor miserable world. His great soul

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN SWEDEN'S LIQUOR LAW.

Another Scheme of Dividing the Profits — Leading Provisions of the New Act.

An important change has gone into effect in the law regulating the liquor trade in Sweden. It has been found necessary to alter the Gothenberg system of licensing, which resorts to disinterested ownership as a cure for excessive drinking.

It is now recognized that critics of its most essential feature were justified. The original aim was to apply all the profits after paying 5 per cent. interest to the holders of the capital to beneficial purposes, municipal and national.

This must have worked out less nobly than it sounds, for it is in the allocation of the profits that the new law has had to make a change. Municipal cupidity had reached the pitch of practically obscuring the moral purpose of the system.

The owning company, known as a "Bolag," is the unit in which the Gothenburg system works itself out. It does not concern itself with beer, in which there is, practically free trade, but controls the production and distribution of spirits, especially the popular native spirit known as brännvin. There was an agitation to bring beer under the system by the new act, but public opposition was too strong and it was defeated.

RURAL DISTRICTS

are now under the system which at first applied only to the towns. Among the leading provisions of the new act are the following: Not less than one litre of spirits may in future be sold for consumption off the premises; the board of directors of a Bolag shall consist of five members, three appointed by the shareholders, one by the county council and one by the local agricultural society.

A new element in supervision is that a representative of the local government board attends the meetings of each Bolag, taking part in its discussions, but not in its decisions. At public entertainments spirits may not be served on the premises.

What is chiefly novel in the new act is the provision for dealing with the surplus profits of the Bolags. From experience the country has learned that the policy of appropriating to the relief of local rates the greater part of the profits has often demoralized municipal authorities.

Many of its first advocates in Sweden have admitted throughout that it was not simply the desire for promoting temperance that animated them. They furthered its adoption by pointing to the opportunity of reducing local taxation by annexing the profits of the trade.

Under the act of 1895 in Sweden 70 per cent of the surplus profits of the Bolags went to the municipal authorities; 10 per cent, to the local agricultural society, and 20 per cent, to the public treasury for division among the rural districts according to population.

THE NET PROFITS

of the Gothenburg company alone have increased from $14,000 in 1866 to $385,000 in 1906.

The law now recognizes the danger of leaving 70 per cent. of this sum in the hands of the local authorities, which in future will get a very much smaller proportion. The passage in the new act which deals with surplus profits is as follows: "In the towns 29 per cent., together with an additional percentage decreasing from 19 per cent. in 1908 to 1 per cent. in 1920, will go to the municipal authorities and the balance will be paid into the public treasury." Out your convenience, until I have finished this exordium.

"Now, young gentleman, I wish you particularly to bear in mind the following considerations: whenever you hear your simple people talking hot air about the Old Country. It is from our islands that we send every year, out of our schools and universities, young and healthy boys, who rule vast provinces, and bless with justice millions of alien people. They ask no one to wave flags, but they maintain peace throughout India. They ask no one to sing Rule Britannia, but they sow with corn the desert of Egypt. Consider the miracle of Egypt. That miracle is the work of the Old Country—the work of her boys. From the same Old Country we draw the boys who crowd the ships of Britain and protect on every sea the commerce of people kind enough to fly the Union Jack, and unkind enough to speak amiably of the Old Country. From the same country is directed the Consular Service of which a noble use is made, without fee, by our half-headed Britons beyond the seas.

BRITAIN'S PROTECTION.

Listen, I pray you. This Great Britain of ours, young gentlemen, is hope for about its colonies, and is proud of its colonies; but a hen, even when her chickens have learned to peck for themselves, can still lay eggs. Pray do not think that Britannia is doddering. Britannia is no fool. Britannia is quite well, I thank you. If you prefer American customs and manners, if you desire the American spirit and not the British spirit to inspire your politics, your home life, literature, and your art—go before your administration of the law, your authors of old times and propose an application to Washington for passport absorption. But whatever line you follow, be so good as to remember when you speak of the Old Country that Great Britain protects you, that Great Britain is flourishing in the van of her nations, and whenever you hear the name of Great Britain, if you cannot go so far as to take off your hat, at least refrain from—The suiton, I observe, is prolific in your country."

RIOTS CAUSED BY PERFUMES.

Outbreaks Are Sometimes Caused by National Feeling.

In Berlin, the other day, a riot was unwittingly started by a lady who had perfumed herself with musk to such an extent as to cause annoyance to the other occupants of a car in which she was a passenger.

Some of the London newspapers, in reporting the affair, alluded to it as "a unique occurrence." But in so doing they were not correct. Other similar outbreaks have been several times similarly caused.

For instance, in Paris, as well as in many other French cities, very serious rioting was started in 1871 by people who persisted in scenting themselves with anti-deodorant; the reason being, of course, that this desecrated popular perfume is of German origin, and anything and everything German was just at that period anathema in France. Indeed, so high did popular feeling run in the matter, that at Lyons, Bordeaux, Amiens, and elsewhere, anti-deodorant societies were formed, whose members pledged themselves to forcibly prevent the use of the obnoxious scent by their fellow-citizens.

During the Greek war of independence, again it was deemed unpropitious to appear in the streets of Athens unscented with attar of roses, the national perfume; while, conversely, the heavy Turkish perfumes were rigidly tabooed. As these latter, however, have from time immemorial been greatly favored by the pleasure-loving Athenian aristocracy, their disuse was by no means either so general or so immediate as the much desired.

"The result was a series of savage personal onslaughts on individual 'offenders,' followed by reprisals in kind, during the course of which lives were lost and much property destroyed.

time improvement in regard to the crime of the country as shown in the number of prisoners. Here are some comparisons with the previous year:

	1905-6	1906-7
Convicted at assizes and quarter sessions:
Offences against the person	1,364	1,442
Offences against property	7,357	7,332
Other offences	251	192
In total offences tried summarily	21,890	20,272
Other offences tried summarily	164,491	149,165
Totals	186,656	178,343

The greater part of the decrease was due to cases tried summarily. Thus there were decreases of 5,202 persons imprisoned for drunkenness, 662 for breach of police regulations and county and borough by-laws, and 588 for common assault. In all, this class of case accounted for 16,707 of the total reduction of 16,711 prisoners.

DOGS ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

French Army Urged to Use Them to Retrieve the Wounded.

Since dogs have proved to be such able assistants to the Paris police corps why shouldn't they be trained to reinforce the hospital and ambulance service of the French army? The advantages of this innovation have been set forth at some length by Dr. Bichelonne and Capt. Tolet in a volume which has just been published. It is entitled: "Dog as an Aid to the Sanitary Corps." That dogs should be taught to seek out the wounded on the battlefield is no new idea. The experiment was tried with success at the time of the Boer war, and at the Battle of Chailly in the conflict in the Far East three dogs sent out by the German Alibische discovered twenty-three soldiers who had been given up for lost.

In 1890, by the order of the German War Ministers, two dogs were added to the sanitary corps of one of the crack regiments. Since then clubs for the training of dogs in war time have been formed in Dresden, Cologne, Götting, Aachen and Neuwied. Similar societies have been organized in Holland, Sweden and Italy. In fact all of the European countries have turned their attention to the subject at one time or other except France.

Dr. Bichelonne and Capt. Tolet urge the military authorities to regard this omission. There are many good breeds of dogs in France which would take easily to the military training.

It is an undisputed fact, these authors say, that after an engagement there are many wounded and dying who are overlooked by the nurses and litter carriers. A case in point is quoted. At the battle of Rezonville-Gravelotte in 1870 a injured soldier lay for three days in a ravine. The ground had been gone over many times by the ambulance service, and yet they had not been found. In instances like this the usefulness of dogs as scouts is unquestioned.

It is a wonder that European armies have not awakened long before this last decade to the importance of dogs as practical helpers in war time, the authors think. On the battlefield the role of these canine assistants would be very much the same as that of the St. Bernard dogs—and they have been rescuing snow-bound travellers for several centuries.

Professor Dammer of Graz has recently perfected an apparatus for photographing the interior of the human eye which is said to give better results than any hitherto attained. By means of a system of lenses and mirrors a flash of light is sent into the eye and the illuminated image of the retina is projected upon a photographic plate. The exposure is limited to a sixteenth of a twentieth of a second in order to avoid the physiological effects. The purpose of the invention is to obtain correct information concerning diseased states of the retina and the pictures are clear and full of detail.

WOULD WELCOME DEATH.

"Although he always talked of the shortness of life, it is too awful, too cruel, and yet it must be for his good, his happiness. His purity was too great, his aspiration too high for this poor miserable world. His great soul is now enjoying that for which it was worthy, and I will not envy him, only pray that mine may be perfected by it, and fit to be with him eternally, for which blessed moment I earnestly long."

Just before the death of William IV, Queen Victoria, on June 19, 1837, wrote to Leopold, referring to her expected accession:

"I look forward to the event, which, it seems, is likely to occur soon, with calmness and quietness. I am not alarmed at it, and yet I do not suppose myself quite equal to it. I trust, however, that with good-will, honesty and courage I shall not, at all events, fail." This letter coincided with the hope that "the All-Powerful Being, who has so long watched over my calamities, will guide and support me in whatever situation and station it may please Him to place me."

CROWN HURT HER.

Queen Victoria, in the course of a long description of her coronation in her private journal, said:

"Millions of my subjects showed good humor and excessive loyalty, and really I cannot say how proud I feel to be Queen of such a nation."

When my good Lord of Melbourne knelt down and kissed my hand he pressed my hand and I grasped his with my heart. . . . The Archbishop had most awkwardly put the ring on the wrong finger, and I had the greatest difficulty to take it off again, which at last I did with great pain. . . . The crown hurt me a good deal."

THE GREAT DUKE

The Queen thus referred to the Duke of Wellington—

"I am sure you will mourn with us, as you have experienced in the death of the dear and great old Duke of Wellington. He was the pride and the bon genie, as it were, of this country. He was the greatest man this country ever produced, and the most devoted and loyal subject, and the staunchest supporter the Crown ever had. He was so us a true, kind friend and a most valuable adviser. To think that all this great and immortal man belongs now to history and no longer to the present is a truth which we cannot realize."

THREW AWAY MILLIONS.

Financier, Once Well-known, Becomes Raving Maniac.

Louis A. Gauduin, of Chicago, who duped half a million people in twenty years, and whose operations netted him nearly $5,000,000, became a raving maniac in the Government prison at Atlanta, Georgia. He was removed yesterday to the Government asylum for the insane in Washington.

Gauduin's last freak, which attracted wide interest, was his threat about a year ago to build a miniature prison outside the penitentiary at Joliet and become his own jailer unless he was permitted to serve the four and a half years' sentence imposed on him by Judge Landis for a lottery fraud.

Gauduin became one of the greatest swindlers of the age, but his distorted fancy led him to throw away his millions as fast as he made them. He did not drink, neither did he smoke. None of the ordinary vices attracted him. He simply was "gold mad." His money was spent to satisfy his whims and cravings for constant excitement. Sumptuous apartments, costly carriages drawn by blooded pairs, which he rode behind dressed in silk and embroidered bathrobes, and countless schemes for self-advertisement, into which he tossed money with both hands, drained his well-stocked coffers.

in a future will get a very much smaller proportion. The passage in the new act which deals with surplus profits is as follows: "In the towns 29 per cent., together with an additional percentage decreasing from 19 per cent. in 1906 to 1 per cent. in 1920, will go to the municipal authorities and the balance will be paid into the public treasury." Out of the amounts thus received by the treasury the latter is first to set aside an amount equivalent to one one-hundredth part of all the taxes and profits throughout the country to further the temperance cause and fight against the evils of drunkenness, and secondly, to distribute among the county councils and towns independent of the county councils a sum equivalent to one-fifth of the total spirit trade receipts and among the local agricultural societies, a sum equivalent to one-eighth of the total spirit trade receipts. The remaining funds are to be distributed by the treasury among the country districts according to population. The intention of these new provisions is to lessen the opportunities of local cupidity.

RAILWAYS BUILT FOR WAR.

Strategic Lines Which Russia is Building Towards India.

There is something very sinister in the news, telegraphed from India the other day, that the Russians have at length completed the great steel and concrete bridge across the Oxus at Karakoram, on which they have been busy ever since the autumn of 1905.

For this bridge is the last and principal link in the new strategical railway, which is being built between the great city of Samarkand, in Russian Turkistan, and the little village of Beshkent, on the Afghan frontier; and as soon as the rails are laid, which will be in a few months' time, the Czar will be able, should he so wish, to easily mass a million of men upon the borders of this debatable territory.

Nor is this all. Another of these strategical railways has also been recently completed from the Caspian to Penjdeh, by way of Merv. This means that Herat, the traditional "Key of India," is now within easy striking distance of St. Petersburg.

Silently have these great trunk lines been constructed, and secretly. They have never been opened for traffic, except locally on certain sections, else would it be possible to look from Charing Cross to Penjdeh, and to travel thither in the course of a few days.

They are, in fact, railways built for war, and for war only. The sterile regions through which they run can, for the most part, never support any permanent population, and they lead nowhere—at present. They stop short on the frontier of Afghanistan, amid a jumble of mountains and morasses and uninhabited salt deserts.

Who can doubt, however, that the intention is to some day complete them? To carry them south through the Afghan passes to the fertile plains of India? And this, of course, can only be accomplished by force of arms.

Let Britain look to it.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE NILE OF 1907.

Writing from Cairo, Consul-General L. M. Huddings states that the letters of Nile water on the lands in previous years took place on June 27, but that it will be a "poor Nile" this year, owing to lighter rains in Abyssinia and the upper Nile country, it is not expected that this will make much difference with the Egyptian crops; however, owing to the storage of water at Assuan and by the Esneh, the Delta, and the Zibie barrage. The area of land in upper Egypt, which will get no water (called charaki), and will therefore pay no tax, will be considerable and slightly cut down the revenue of the State. There will also be extra trouble and expense in handling the basin water.

GRAND ENGLISH HOMES

THE WOMEN ARE SUPREMACY AS HOST-TRESSES AT HOUSE PARTIES.

A Modification of the Tipping System Which Relieves the Impetuous Guest.

This is the time of the Englishwoman's triumph. This is the time when she finds herself in her most natural and well-filled sphere, that of hostess. For in her own beautiful country home with a house crowded with guests, the Englishwoman shows herself a charming and tactful hostess, an excellent house-keeper and manager, and a kind, thoughtful and womanly woman, writes a London correspondent.

Just now the round of visits paid by those in the "social swim" in England is in full swing, and houses are filled to their utmost capacity with distinguished guests who bring retinues of servants with them, and more modest visitors who get along with one maid or one valet, as the case may be. There is a delightful lack of formality at these house parties. Guests do much as they please, and are not marshalled in bands like tourists to be taken about for walks, drives, etc. The English hostess realizes that her guests are best left to choose their own pleasures, so she lets them fill in their days for themselves. However, she is very solicitous of their comfort. For the men and most of the women the main interest of the visit is the shooting, and to be a line shot in England is to be sure of many delightful invitations, provided you've a certain amount of the necessary blue blood and social prestige. Of all questions that for many years have worried hospitably minded hosts and hostesses in country house entertaining the most difficult to deal with has been the question of

"TIPPING THE SERVANTS."

A country house visit costs as much as a Continental trip when it necessitates remunerating all the house servants of your host as well as the men who have served at the shooting. Many a youth socially desirable as well as an excellent shot is obliged to decline invitations because he cannot manage to put up the fees.

A very wise host and hostess have solved the problem as far as their guests are concerned, as they have placed a box in the hall, which is marked "shooting tip box." This is carefully locked until after the departure of the guests after each shoot, when the contribution to the general fund is divided among the men by the host or his agent. In this way the impetuous guest suffers no embarrassment when he feels he can only spare a small amount, since naturally there is no way of knowing what any one person gives.

One popular hostess, Lady Londonderry, has started this season a visitors' library. In an anteroom just off the great hall there stands a large round table covered with the newest books, and raised above it is a board in which big letters one sees printed "Books to read to be returned at your leisure." So the guests can beguile their railway journeys with the books they have not finished.

It was the Duchess of Marlborough who first had the temerity to do away with that relic of the past.

THE BELL ROPE.

which had to be rung to summon one's maid from her distant quarters. At Blenheim Castle all the servants' quarters are connected with those of their masters or mistresses by cunningly devised telephones, certainly a tremendous improvement over the bell ropes, which have a way of breaking when pulled by a too vigorous hand. It is at Blenheim Castle, too, that the suites of guests' rooms are marvels of elegance and beauty with crystal covered dressing tables, where silver or gilt-topped toilet articles can glitter as they have never glittered before.

The momentous question of how to dispose of her friends' multifarious

BUILD ROYAL YACHTS

BRITAIN CONSTRUCTS FOR THE RULERS OF THE WORLD.

Russia's Ruler is Extravagant — The Kaiser's Floating Palace Hohenzollern.

The launch of His Majesty's new yacht Alexandra, at Glasgow, by Her Royal Highness Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, says the London Times, marks another notch in Scotland's record as yacht builder to the royalties of the world. The Alexandra is the first of the modern British vessels of this type to be built north of the Tweed, but Scotland can claim to have given of the best her shipbuilders can provide to the rulers of Italy, Spain, Portugal, Roumania and Siam, while in England yachts have been constructed for the Czar of Russia, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Greece and the Sultan of Turkey. There are altogether twenty-two of these vessels afloat, and the British Isles are responsible for fifteen of them, and Scotland for eleven.

CZAR MOST EXTRAVAGANT.

The most extravagant of monarchs in the matter of sea palaces is not, as one might suppose, the German Emperor, but the Czar of Russia, who owns no fewer than five steam yachts. The principal one of them is, of course, the Standart, the largest of all of its type and very similar in appearance to the Victoria and Albert (for there are two of that name), which was built in the closing years of the reign of Queen Victoria. She is of 5,500 tons displacement and has three small steam cutters in constant attendance on her.

TIRED OF HOHENZOLLERN.

Of all the floating palaces possessed by foreign potentates none is more familiar to English eyes than the Hohenzollern, in which the German Emperor makes his periodical and often sensational voyages abroad. She is a splendid looking vessel, with all the appearance of a formidable commerce destroyer and a close resemblance to the United States cruiser Minneapolis, which was built expressly to fill that role. Built at Stettin in 1892, she is 380 feet long, has a displacement of over 4,100 tons and can attain a speed of 22 knots, but it is said that the Kaiser is tired of her and that before the end of the year another will be put in hand. When the Kaiser accompanies his war fleet to sea he flies the imperial flag in the battleship named after himself, the Kaiser Wilhelm II., which was specially constructed with that idea in view.

1,500 MILES ON AN ICE-RAFT.

Remarkable Journey of the Survivors of the "Polaris."

The recent trying experience of the three Labrador fishermen, who drifted on an ice-floe from Port Mankvels nearly across to Greenland, before being sighted and rescued by an American whaler, has been several times paralleled in the past, some of the recorded instances being of an even more remarkable nature.

Thus, the crew of the German exploring ship, Hansa, which was crushed in the pack off Spitzbergen on October 22nd, 1892, navigated an ice-raft over 1,100 miles to the little Danish settlement of Friedrichshavn, near Cape Farwell, Greenland, where they arrived in June, 1870, apparently but little the worse. During the latter portion of their voyage, however, they suffered agonies of apprehension through the rapid melting away of their unique craft.

Even more remarkable was the similar journey performed by a party of the survivors of the Polaris, wrecked by the ice in South Sound on October

PRICE OF GOOD HORSES

STILL GOING UP RAPIDLY IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

Motor Cars, Instead of Lowering Prices, Has Had Precisely the Opposite Effect.

Horses are dearer. The boom in motor-cars instead of lowering the price of horses has had precisely the opposite effect. Mr. P. Hearn, one of the largest horse buyers in London, England, whose stock consists of about 2,000 animals of every grade, explained the cause of the rise in price the other day.

Incidentally, Mr. Hearn, who runs both horse and motor-omnibuses, made a strong indictment against the motor-omnibus, for which he declares there is no future.

"Those people who prophesied that motor-cars would make horses three a penny," said Mr. Hearn, "were very much out. There are not enough horses to go round to-day. Many causes have combined to send up the price of horse-flesh. First of all, farmers were frightened when motor-cars were first introduced, and breeding fell off enormously. They were afraid of being ruined, for at that time it was said that the motor vehicles

WOULD OUST THE HORSE.

"The chief cause of the scarcity is that we have depleted America and Canada of their horses. Until ten years ago the American Continent had not been looked to for horses; freights were dear, and the English buyer had not discovered its possibilities.

"When they did it was a new market, and American horses were shipped to England at the rate of 20,000 a year. I am speaking, of course, of the practical working horse—the 'machine' horse, as they call it in America. In ten years the market has run dry, and now we import about ten American horses a month into England.

"The South African war did more to deplete the supply of horses than anything of late years, and now America wants all the horses she has for herself, while the same thing applies to Canada.

"Ten years ago a good horse, suitable for omnibus and heavy work, cost $75 in America, which, with the $50 freight, brought the price up to $125. To-day the American horse costs exactly twice as much.

"One of the finest horses I have ever had is an American, which cost $420. It is used on state occasions by the city corporation to-day, and I would be willing to pay almost any price for another if I could match it.

"After the American market gave way, the buyers tried Denmark, and in a very few months that supply was exhausted also. Now we have to rely

SOLELY ON THE BRITISH ISLES.

"The demand for trade horses in England is enormous. Ten years ago the average price was $190 to $200. To-day it is $250. Next year it will be higher still.

"As for the motor-omnibuses, I have tried them, and under the present conditions they are impossible. I do not see how their prospect can ever be improved. Motor-omnibuses were a mistake from the first. If the horse omnibus had to go, it was the tube and the tram which might have done it, not the motor-omnibus. We were forced into handling what we have in order to protect the horse omnibuses we run. But now we cannot keep the motor vehicles on the street to pay expenses. Motor-omnibuses do not make both ends meet.

"At a rough estimate I should say that $10,000,000 has been lost in motor-omnibus ventures.

"Meanwhile, the old estimate that

THOUSAND CATS WANTED

GO SAID ANNOUNCEMENT IN ENGLISH PAPER.

Joker Continues to Hoax — Hundreds of Cats Brought in Answer to Advertisement.

No doubt great delight has been afforded to the joker who has recently perpetrated more hoaxes at Bermondsey, England. The first of these, in the form of advertisements for nurse-girls—a well-to-do middle-aged grocer with a grown-up family was the victim—attracted about fifty women and girls to the shop, and it was some time before the astonished grocer could convince the crowd that he had no need of nurses. Hardly had this mob disappeared when a photographer arrived to photograph a wedding group. An hour later, an undertaker's van was driven up in response to a call "to bury a dead unbaptized infant."

Having amused himself in Bermondsey and Ilsey, the hoaxer turned his attention to Redhill. In the afternoon passengers were surprised and mystified by the number of persons who were seen about carrying cats. As the afternoon wore on the number of cats increased rapidly.

SIX IN HAMPER.

There were cats in bags, in baskets, in hampers, and even in perambulators—black cats and white cats and grey cats and Persians and Manx cats. One boy had six—a mixed lot—in a hamper. Most of the cat-carriers endeavored to look as though they were unaware of the existence of all the others, and, for themselves, were regularly in the habit of taking pussy out for an airing to the railway station.

Others made guarded and offhand inquiries. These related to a man who was to give them £1 a head for all the medically approved cats they could produce. Could anyone direct them to him?

Curiously enough, no one could. The porters, however, grinned, and the other spectators began to take a new and amused interest in the affair. A man with a cat under each arm managed, with some trouble, to get a copy of the "Surrey Mirror" out of his pocket and pointed out this advertisement:

WANTED 1,000 CATS.

1,000 Cats. Wanted.—An application having been received from a large Colonial firm for 1,000 cats, to blot out a plague of mice, we are prepared to pay £1 for each cat (in sound health) presented to our representative at the S. E. and C. Railway Goods Department, Redhill, on Wednesday, the 25th inst., between 2.30 and 3.30 p. m. J. Stern and Co., 94 Commercial Road, London, E.

And all the time the import of cats was being steadily maintained, and the station resounded with feline voices, from the resonant call of the full-grown Tom to the pleading wail of the kitten. The crowd of cats and their owners, speedily assumed the dimensions of a nuisance, so the station-master cleared the yard, and had it patrolled by an inspector and two men, with strict instructions to keep out all cats. Then the competitors departed sadly home, shedding cats on the way.

Telephone messages to Messrs. Stern soon elicited the fact that cats were not in the line, and when several of the victims realized they had been hoaxed they paid a fruitless visit to the offices of the local paper.

DISCOVERY IN WHEAT.

Grain Surpassing that of Manitoba Grown by Cambridge Scientists.

A discovery that may ultimately revolutionize farming is announced by a a too vigorous hand. It is at Mennem Castle, too, that the suites of guests' rooms are marvels of elegance and beauty with crystal covered dressing tables, where silver or gilt-topped toilet articles can glitter as they have never glittered before.

The momentous question of how to dispose of her friends' multifarious wardrobes is another problem for the English hostess, as old houses are not built with spacious closets in every room in which to hang the last creations of the dressmaker. The clever hostess has to plan and twist things about. Sometimes the passage to the maid's room will be hung with satin or silk, and countless hooks put up for the gowns of chiffon and lace.

THE BREAKFAST HOUR

It is always been difficult to manage, or rather the breakfast hours, as the guests come down when they please. The long dreary dining-room table with its covered dishes to which one helped oneself was always a depressing affair to several up-to-date hostesses, so this season has seen an innovation in that arrangement. As several dining rooms are now fitted out with small tables for two or three, each with its separate service. One enterprising woman brought back with her from Normandy this season a great many sets of the delightful old French individual coffee pots, milk pitchers and duck china cups used in the quaint French inns. These are kept in readiness at smartly-appointed silver spirit heaters on the side table, so the latest guest down to breakfast will get his tea or coffee at the moment, as if at a first-rate hotel, to say nothing of the pretty little portion of butter, crisp French rolls and other breakfast delicacies ready to his hand.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

No life is fruitful without frost.
All helpful service is born of sympathy.
Folk who expect failure seldom are disappointed.
Patience with lesser lives is born of the larger life.
Talking and the road to heaven is not the same as walking in it.
You are free from any divinity so long as you despise any humanity.
It's hard to say blue when you are brightening the lot of another.
Many think they repent the sowing when they only fear the reaping.
There's a lot of difference between saving money and hoping to be saved by it.
You never will have the privilege of sympathy without the price of suffering.
The lives of some of its friends hurt religion more than the logic of its foes.
Perfection is a good deal more than the power of picking faults in other people.
You may know by its warmth and cover whether a man's light comes from heaven.
Some people never display their retiring dispositions except in the face of an enemy.
Lots of men outline a brilliant national policy who make a failure of ordinary parenthood.
If you go to church for the sake of your coat you are likely to leave your heart at home.
No wonder the hypocrite deceives himself when he is foolish enough to think he is deceiving the Almighty.
It is a good deal easier to say "brother" in a smooth way than to spend time spotting your brother's way.
Folks who are seeing-sawing between right and wrong always think that Providence gives them a good many ups and downs in life.

SPOKE FOR HER.

He—"Why are you wearing that expensive dress at that dinner to-night? It isn't such a swell affair."
She—"I know it, but I don't feel like talking much, and with this gown on I won't be entirely lost sight of!"

the worse. During the latter portion of their voyage, however, they suffered agonies of apprehension through the rapid melting away of their unique craft.

Even more remarkable was the similar journey performed by a party of the survivors of the Polaris, wrecked by the ice in Smith Sound on October 15th, 1872. These consisted of Captain Tyson, nine men of the crew, five male Eskimos, three Eskimo women, and an Eskimo baby, nineteen souls in all.

The ice-raft upon which they had taken refuge was only about 100 yards in length by seventy-five yards broad, but they had a goodly store of provisions and fuel, also timber. With the latter a substantial hut was built for the whites; while the Eskimos erected several snow houses for their own accommodation.

All through the black Arctic winter they drifted south, through Baffin Bay and Davis Strait, until with the coming of spring the floe gradually began melting away beneath their feet. Finally, it became reduced to the "size of a drawing-room carpet," so that they gave themselves up for lost. But, on April 30th, 1873, when in the last extremity, they were seen and rescued by the British steamer Tigress. The castaways were then only about one hundred miles north of Newfoundland, having sailed and drifted on their precarious raft a distance of 1,500 miles in 196 days.

INDIA'S SILENT MILLIONS.

Understand Government as a System of Rule From Above.

These peoples have their own conceptions of government, which are ingrained in them by traditions going back beyond the dawn of history, and these conceptions are incompatible with modern democratic ideals, says the London Times. Government, outside the immediate concerns of their own villages, means to them emphatically a system of rule from above. The notion that it could be a privilege or a right to govern themselves or to choose their rulers is outside the range of their thoughts. The mind of the silent millions, which the utterances of the agitators trained in European learning do not reflect, has no belief at all in the existence of constitutional restrictions on the power of governors and magistrates.

There is, without question, no small measure of truth in the compliment of many of the old-fashioned natives, that our schools have sapped the old moral foundations of Indian society, and that we have not set up any other foundations in their stead. The more conservative classes are filled with contempt at the sight of, and school-boys rioting about the rights of man, and proceeding to illustrate their severity by beating traders, sucking a mission-house, insulting women, bullying the children who frequent the mission schools, and indulging in the other acts of petty tyranny of which Dr. McKichan, of the United Free Church, and the Rev. Mr. Anderson, of the Baptist Missionary Society, have been complaining. These time-honored classes, however much the apostles of enlightenment may deplore it, do still possess in India great authority with the masses of the people. The constitution of society in the greater part of the land is still in its essence feudal, and the peasant looks upon his feudal superior with respect and obeys his hereditary authority.

Hal—"Have you stopped calling on the cat with the plaid blouse?" Tom—"Yes; it's all over there." Hal—"Why? Father object?" Tom—"Bless you, no! And I had nerve enough to dodge all her hints about popping the question also, but the last time I called she had the sing, 'Do It Now' stuck on the centre table. That foored me, and I've quit."

to protect the horse-omnibuses we run. But now we cannot keep the motor vehicles on the street to pay expenses. Motor-omnibuses do not make both ends meet.

"Meanwhile it is the old vehicle that is booming. The receipts have gone up 10 per cent. over all our routes, while the motor-omnibus receipts are down at least 15 per cent. The public have got over the novelty, and are going back to the reliable horse-omnibus. You see people standing on the kerb letting motor-omnibuses go by and deliberately choosing a horse-drawn vehicle."

MEN WITH CHARMED LIVES.

It is Curious How Partial is Fate as Regards Fatal Accidents.

One man ventures once in his life on a mountain climb, a balloon ascent, or other more or less dangerous enterprise, and forthwith gets killed. Another spends years in courting a violent death, and dies in his bed at last.

Take, for example, the case of Captain Kindelan, the military aeronaut, who was discovered the other day by the master of the British ship West Point swimming about in the middle of the Mediterranean Sea. He had kept from the semi-submerged car of his derelict balloon to what looked like certain death, yet lived to tell the tale, as he had done—and this is the extraordinary part of the affair—no fewer than three before under almost precisely similar circumstances.

Another remarkable case in point is that of Mr. George Albert Strachan, the only passenger who escaped absolutely unhurt from the terrible Salisbury railway accident of last year. In 1902 Mr. Strachan also got out scatheless from the burning Troquois Theatre, Chicago, when between eight and nine hundred lives were lost; while four years before that he happened to be one of about half a dozen lucky ones saved from the steamship Portland, sunk off Cape Cod in a terrific Atlantic gale, on which occasion 157 less fortunate people perished.

Still more remarkable was the case of a master mariner named Owen Richard, who died peacefully in his bed recently in his house in the East End of London, after having been nine times wrecked, three times rescued from burning ships, and once blown over a hundred feet into the air by the explosion of a cargo of gunpowder that killed no fewer than seventeen of his shipmates.

ORDERS CAREFULLY EXECUTED.

Kirk Edward has a very high opinion of that fine sportsman and shrewd man of business, Sir Thomas Lipton, and the latter may almost be regarded as one of his Majesty's intimate friends.

Not very long ago they were chatting and smoking together in the grounds of Windsor Castle, when suddenly the King stopped.

"Oh, by the way, Lipton," he said, "don't be surprised if an Order comes your way."

"It will be promptly attended to," replied Sir Thomas.

And the King roared with delight, for the Order he had referred to was not for bacon, but one of the coveted marks of distinction.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

"Yes," said Billings. "Mrs. Joyce is always sunny and looking on the bright side of things and all that, but still there's such a thing as overdoing that 'bright side' business. The other night I was up there, and Joyce—you know how absent-minded he is?—put the lighted end of his cigar in his mouth. He jumped three feet, and was a little noisy for a minute. Right in the midst of it all Mrs. Joyce smiled blandly, and said: 'How fortunate you were, dear, to discover it at once!'"

DISCOVERY IN WHEAT.

Grain Surpassing that of Manitoba Grown by Cambridge Scientists.

A discovery that may ultimately revolutionize farming is announced by a group of Cambridge (England) scientists. Very careful experiments have been made during the last eight years in testing and crossing the qualities both of plants and animals. The immediate result of the Cambridge experiments has been to create varieties of wheat and barley which will surpass the quality even of Manitoba hard grain by 10 per cent. or more.

Professor Middleton, Professor Wood, and Mr. R. H. Biffen during the last eight years have been conducting the experiments at the Cambridge University experimental farm at Impington. All the known varieties of wheat throughout the world were collected together and grown on a small scale. As was only to be expected, the majority absolutely refused to be acclimatized, but a few showed a disposition to be kinder. Eventually a few hopeful varieties were selected for such characteristics as resistance to the attacks of rust, good cropping capacity, fine milling quality, stiff straw, and such like, and were crossed with British wheats with the idea of combining all these good qualities in one variety. By the careful application of the recently discovered Mendelian laws a number of new varieties have been produced and have been "fixed." Passing through various trials, they were eventually submitted to the tests of milling and baking, with the most satisfactory results.

The department is meeting with similar success in an attempt to breed wheats which shall be resistant to the attacks of the deadly yellow rust, and barleys which shall be a great improvement on those at present grown in England.

SAVED OVER 25 LIVES.

At the Age of 23, Young Man Has Done Splendid Rescue Work.

At the age of 23 Amos Fargelle, of Springfield, Mass., has saved the lives of more than twenty-five persons, more than one life for every year of his existence. Fargelle's rescues have all been effected in the Connecticut River, and have been about equally divided between the sexes. So far this season he has prevented seven deaths by drowning.

Fargelle says, there is a thrill in running risks when a life is at stake.

"What I object to is false alarms," he says. "Sometimes I have heard cries, and hastening to the source of them have been given the 'Ho, ho.' After one of these experiences I am tempted to ignore the next call until I am sure it is not a fake. Once I saved the life of a woman, who afterward admitted he had given a false alarm. He felt pretty cheap, according to his own story—a good deal worse, in fact, than I did."

THE PEACEFUL SUBURBS.

"Set off an endless chain war with your neighbors, eh?" said the visitor from the city. "How is that?"

"Well," replied the suburbanite, "the chickens flew over the fence and ate all my garden seed. I got over by setting a big tom cat and the cat ate the chickens."

"Ah, an eye for an eye, eh?"

"Yes; but it wasn't long before he ate a bulldog and the bulldog finished the tom cat."

"Great Scott! I suppose that ended the feud?"

"Not at all. I borrowed a cat from a wandering circus, and had him eat the bulldog. Now, if he doesn't get an elephant to finish the original feud, I can return it to the show I guess I'll come out winner."

Joakley: "Once being about that tall man over there. All his intimate friends call him 'Short.' Joakley: "Ah, just for a joke. I suppose?" Joakley: "No, because that's his name."

the national resources should be developed in a manner which should benefit all the people—that a vigorous immigration policy would be adopted which would result in making of the Northwest a territory of waving corn fields, instead of the solitary home of the prairie dog.

—Dreary Conservative Times.

All of this has been done and more. In a short eleven years the Liberal party has changed Canada so that the old days of Conservative regime remain but as a horrid nightmare. The days of grafting, jobbery, internecine quarrels, debt, disloyalty and capacity have been succeeded by honest administration, prudent expenditure of public money, big surpluses, loyalty and statesmanship.

Sir Willfred Laurier enjoys the confidence of the people of Canada to a marked degree. He has done no act since he came to power which forfeits this confidence. The best years of his life have been given to his country, and the people will sustain him just as long as he seeks to remain in public life.

Scandals Not Popular.

It has been said that the approaching session will be utilized by the opponents of the government to continue their disgraceful attacks of slander. If the Conservatives regard it as a duty to their constituents and to their country to make of the legislative halls of Parliament a bear garden, they will be judged accordingly.

One fact must not be overlooked, that is that discredited men will not be allowed to monopolize the time of Parliament. When reminded of their own delinquencies, these self-constituted censors will subside, and the business of the country will proceed.

Discredited Men Silent.

There should be no repetition of the disgraceful scenes of the last two sessions. Mr. Foster hurling his anathemas broadcast, charging reputable people with crimes, holding up eminent men to derision—all of these things should be impossible now. The House can remind Mr. Foster that he has only just emerged from the investigation of a Royal Commission with his own reputation besmirched, how then can he have the audacity to continue his attacks from the standpoint of one whose record justifies such position? Mr. Foster has forfeited any right he may once have had to criticize, he himself will be the object of every caustic criticism should he have the impertinence to obtrude his objectionable personalities upon the House.

The same may be said of several other Conservative members, their unbridled tongues were used to vilify their fellow members, but inexorable retribution overtook them in an exposure of their dealings in which they traded upon their positions as members of the House. These gentlemen will not be so pliant in the future.

Being in mind that the Conservative party is so unpopular, and many of its prominent members have been discredited before the people, it is not likely that former attempts at slander and baseless charges of wrong doing will be repeated.

Legitimate Arguments Wanted.

If gentlemen who oppose the Government could be brought to the use of legitimate arguments, they would at least command the attention of the House, but such arguments would merely illuminate the policy of the Liberal government, and supply additional reasons for keeping the government in power.

Asinine Methods.

The asinine methods of the Conservatives provoked the derision of the people. For instance that keen finan-

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Advisor is sent free on receipt of stamp to any of the important matters pertaining to government be given to certain commissioners. The Conservatives seek the power to govern, but they seek also to evade the resultant responsibilities. This is a blow at responsible government that the people of Canada will resent. The idea is to hand over important Canadian affairs to a set of politicians who would not be responsible to the people, thus would the Conservatives, if elected to power, be able to say, "We are not responsible for this or that, the commissioners did it."

The Canadian people place a government in power, and hold that government responsible. When the time comes for an account of stewardship to be given, a strict accounting will be exacted and justice will be done. If the government desires a renewal of public confidence, it will be given, if not then the contrary will happen. There will be little sympathy for a party that has the audacity to aspire to government but not the courage or confidence to perform the functions of government.

Examples of Inconsistency.

Some Conservative ideas are ludicrously inconsistent. Of course everybody who devotes attention to politics has observed the dilemma of Foster at all, the men who criticise the government for doing certain things, and when the curtain is ruthlessly lifted by a public commission from their own lives, lo and behold they stand naked and convicted of the self same crimes.

The Conservatives accuse the Liberals of wanton extravagance, but Foster

POLITICAL NEWS!

With the approaching session of Parliament it is well to be reminded that an appeal to the electors of Canada is within measureable distance.

For eleven years the affairs of Canada have been in the hands, and under the control of the Liberal party. Any patriotic citizen who has at heart the best interests of the Dominion, can look back with satisfaction over the past eleven years, and find in each year's record additional reason for continuing his allegiance to the party of prosperity.

Changes for the Better.

What changes have occurred since 1896. In the commercial world Canada was a speck on the map, now she looms up as a national figure. Financially, Canada was not regarded as a desirable field for investment, now she is described by a representative of a great merchantile agency as the most satisfactory country to give ample returns and good security for capital.

The Northwest was an empty wilderness, a source of expense to the people. Today it provides homes for thousands of contented citizens and produces a large revenue. Canada enjoys an immense trade with foreign countries today. At the time the Liberals came into power the manufacturing industries were at a very low ebb. In Conservative times the natural resources of Canada were exploited in the interests of the few. Under a Liberal government the benefits of the public domain are enjoyed by the people at large.

The degree of prosperity which has been Canada's happy experience is remarkable. It rarely falls to the lot of a political party to see its promise fulfilled to such a satisfactory extent. The Liberals promised the people that a policy would be inaugurated which would result in larger revenues—than ditional reasons for keeping the government in power.

Asinine Methods.

The asinine methods of the Conservatives provoked the derision of the people. For instance that keen financier, that man of giant intellect, the man of boundless resource, Geo. E. Foster when minister of finance became convinced that the expenditures of the Dominion were too heavy, and he sought a way of curailing them. What did he do? Did he fund a debt and secure lower interest? No.

Did he put a stop to the pernicious method of giving contracts for public works to politicians who were expected to surrender a portion of their plunder for the benefit of a political corruption fund? No.

Did he make it his business to see that awards for public works were made to the lowest tenderer instead of to the highest? No.

Did he guard the public treasury from the attacks of the grafter and repel the demands of the unscrupulous politician? No.

Foster Took Widow's Mite.

This minister of finance after surveying the situation reduced the salaries of the poor charwomen of the House of Commons, and thereby satisfied his conscience that the public expenditure was well guarded. He saved at the spigot and leaked at the bung hole. He gave out contracts to the highest bidder at a cost to Canada of hundreds of thousands and reduced the poor widow's mite, saving the country a few paltry cents. The middleman was allowed to charge his own price, the only service rendered taking the form of a campaign contribution, but the friendless widow scrubbing on her hands and knees worked hard all night for a miserable pittance.

This was done by Mr. Foster, when finance minister, the man who is referred to in the Royal Commission report on Insurance—the man who accepted a pension of $3,500 a year from the Liberal Government, and gave no service to the country in return—the man who preaches purity and engages in questionable transactions, the same person, who submitted to a verbal castigation at the hands of the Minister of Justice, the humiliation of which he will never forget.

Torres Retarded Progress.

It is a melancholy fact, one that the Conservative party cannot gainsay that Canada under their rule did not advance a foot. They, somehow failed to grasp the inherent possibilities of the Dominion, the resources of Canada were undeveloped, the western territory was maintained as a desolation—The fiscal policy of the Conservatives was on a wrong basis, debt was the constant companion of the Tory Government. Not having the ability to administer public affairs so that the incomes would equal the outgoings, they borrowed money lavishly and spent it recklessly. The Liberal government will shortly have to provide for many millions of debt contracted for by a Conservative government.

For the space of eighteen years the Conservatives were a dead weight upon the country, for this length of time all progress ceased, material advance was arrested, nothing increased but the public debt, no person prospered except the grafters. The Conservative cabinet even lost faith in each other and Sir Mackenzie Bowell Conservative Prime Minister, said he was living in a nest of traitors. The unspeakable Geo. E. Foster was described as the leader in the nest.

No Incompetents Wanted.

To this pack of incompetents would Canadian matters be entrusted, should there be a change of government. No man advances a reason why there should be a change excepting the hungry politicians who are impatient to enjoy the spoils. It is, therefore, quite unlikely there will be any legitimate argument made in the House directed against the Liberals, the answer to such is found in the genuine prosperity and contentment of the people.

Responsibility Evaded.

Take the platform submitted by Mr. Borden, no wonder the people of the West, self-reliant, aggressive, accustomed to encounter difficulties and overcome them, are disgusted with its childish terms, dissatisfied with its acknowledgment of weakness, this platform is so constructed that the government of the day, would be a government in name only, its important functions would be relegated to others.

The Conservatives, while asking to be placed in power, ask also that im-public utilities and handing them over to the tender mercies of inexperienced persons who, of course, would see nothing wrong in diverting large sums into channels leading to political corruption funds.

The Conservatives say the lands should be "restored" to the new provinces, intimating have been deprived of them, but this restoration is to be accompanied by a certain large payment in cash, which would suggest with equal strength that if the provinces want the lands they must pay for them.

The Conservatives say there must be reform in the civil service, and they pledge themselves if elected to forthwith delegate the power of appointment to a commission which will not be responsible to the people, but will, of course, be of the purest and most uncompromising Tory stripe.

Other matters in the platform might be referred to, but the above examples are sufficient to illustrate the contention that the Conservatives are culpably inconsistent, and that the platform upon which they are appealing to the people is a platform of evasion, and that should they be returned to power and keep their pre-election pledges, a blow would be struck at the very root of representative government, because the Conservatives, if they kept faith, would be bound to divest themselves of important governmental functions, and the people would apparently be left without a remedy.

Some Thoughts for Electors.

These considerations are presented to the electors of Canada that they may ponder over them. Sometimes a change of government is desirable, at other times it would be nothing short of a calamity. At this time to disturb the good work going on all over the Dominion, by placing at the head of affairs untried men, could not result in good. Regarded from every aspect, nothing would be gained by exchanging a Liberal government for a Conservative one at this time, and it is a foregone conclusion that incalculable harm might be done to the country.

PRISONER HIS OWN JAILER.

Amusing Story of a Murderer Who Refused to Be Released.

Monaco has no guillotine and no executioner and, indeed, no arrangements for dealing with criminals.

It is the place to recall the amusing story told by Maupassant about a murderer who was tried, convicted and sentenced to death in Monte Carlo. The authorities asked France to loan them M. Deibler and his little instrument, the "red widow." The French government consented to oblige for the consideration of £1,000. The prince thought this too dear and so applied to his brother of Italy. Italy offered to do the thing, all included, for £680. This again was found too dear. "The man is not worth it," said the Monegasque authorities.

So the sentence of death was commuted to one of life imprisonment. But there was no prison in Monaco, and a gaol had to be erected for the express purpose of confining this murderer, and a jailer had to be appointed. This state of things lasted for some months, and then the jailer died.

The authorities at Monte Carlo, when considering the appointment of his successor, came to the conclusion that the man, the one prisoner, was costing the state a great deal of money. So a commission visited him and told him that in future he would be required to act as his own jailer. He grumbled a bit at this increase of sentence, but complied. His meals used to be sent down to him from one of the hotels in the town, but one day the scullion who brought him his dinner did not turn up to time, and so the prisoner walked up to the hotel and took his meal there. After that he got into the habit of going up to the hotel for his meals. Then, after a stroll on the front, he used to return to his prison and shut himself in, carefully bolting the door inside.

But again the authorities found that he was costing them too much, and so one day they called him up and told him that they were sick of seeing him about the place and that he must clear out. He emphatically refused to do anything of the kind. "You sentenced me to penal servitude for life," he argued, "and I expect to work out my sentence. I have no means of earning a livelihood since you created all the bother, and it is to you that I look for my sustenance."

To cut a long story short, the principality of Monaco was obliged to settle an annuity of £24 a year upon the convict before he would consent to accept his freedom and leave the country. As soon as this was arranged he took up his abode in a little cottage just over the Monaco border.

This is a true story, and the document fixing the man's pension, together with details about the payments, may be seen in the Monaco archives.

The late Prince de Monaco was fond of telling this story in Parisian drawing rooms, and, if I remember aright, I heard it on the same occasion as did the late Guy de Maupassant.—London Mail.

NAVAL MYSTERIES.

War Vessels of the United States That Have Disappeared.

Curious disappearances and accidents to our warships characterized the early history of our navy, and in spite of all the efforts of the navy department to explain the cause of the disasters many of them are as absolute mysteries to-day as when they happened.

When the government built ten new gunboats to prosecute the war against Tripoli in 1805, they were sent out as soon as they were finished and before they were named. Each one was given a number and dispatched to the seat of the war. No. 7 sailed from New York July 20, 1805, under the command of Lieutenant Ogelvie, and after she cleared Sandy Hook light she was never heard from again. She went down with all on board before she had even been named.

A most extraordinary accident was that which happened to the corvet Monongahela at Santa Cruz in 1837.

While at anchor in the harbor a tremendous tidal wave lifted her upon its crest and carried her clean over the town of Friedrichstadt and back again without injuring the town or the boat to any great extent. The receding wave landed her on the beach instead of in the deep water of the harbor, and it cost our government $100,000 to float her again. Fully as strange was the fate of the sloop-of-war Wateree. She was anchored in the harbor of Arica, Peru, in 1838, when a huge tidal wave swept inland and flooded the whole city. The wave carried the sloop several miles inland and finally landed her in the midst of a tropical forest. It was impossible to release her from such a peculiar position, and the government sold her for a nominal sum. The purchasers turned the vessel into a hotel, and the remains of that once formidable war vessel loom up in the tropical forest today as a monument to the power of tidal waves.

Among the other cases of disaster which are attributed to the violence of the waves or weather there is none more interesting than that of the strange fate of the Saratoga. When she sailed from Philadelphia in October, 1780, under the command of Captain James Young, there was no finer or handsomer war vessel afloat. That she was as formidable as she was attractive was soon demonstrated in a practical way. After cruising around a short time she captured three British vessels in succession, and then, with her prizes, she started to return to Philadelphia, but off the Delaware

Canada's Increasing Dignity.

Canada has just concluded a commercial treaty with France, and is now sending an envoy direct to the Court of the Japanese Emperor. This does Canada, under the direction of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, exercise more and more the functions of a great nation. As time passes it will become more and more evident that this great Dominion is a force to be reckoned with, and Sir Wilfrid has done much to acquire for Canada a dignity which is now being recognized throughout the world, and the expression of which is the true and lasting Imperialism of which Sir Wilfrid is the fearless exponent.

Lungs That Are Starved.

It is a fact that most of us are victims of our own lazy respiration and deprive ourselves of oxygen that is so necessary if we would keep our bodies at their highest point of efficiency. Oxygen is absolutely necessary to the existence of animal life. Man gets oxygen from air breathed into his lungs. Besides introducing oxygen into the blood, the lungs act as excretory organs, removing undesirable elements from the system at each expiration. In ordinary or unconscious breathing only 10 to 13 per cent of the air in the lungs is changed at each breath, leaving 80 to 90 per cent of the lung capacity filled with stale air. Forced or conscious breathing of pure air ventilates the lungs, driving out the 80 to 90 per cent of the stationary or stale air. All bedroom windows and doors should be wide open during sleep, thus connecting the lungs directly with pure air of the outside world.—Delincentor.

ABSENTMINDED.

A Story of Bunsen, the Great German Scientist.

In the autobiography of Sir Henry Roscoe there is a capital example of the absentmindedness of Bunsen, the great German scientist.

He had had his evening clothes put out that he might attend a card party to which he had been invited, but forgot all about it until the next morning, when his man pointed out that the evening clothes had not been worn. And then he remarked to himself, "I know what I'll do." That evening he put on his dress clothes, went to the lady's house at the appointed time and walked in as if it were the day upon which he had been invited. The hostess, much too polite to tell him that he had mistaken the evening and that the party had taken place on the previous night, sent to her friends asking them to come in to play a rubber again. They did so. In the course of the evening the conversation turned on absentmindedness, and Bunsen began to tell them what had happened to him a long time ago—how that he had forgotten an invitation and how he had made up his mind to go the next night—and thus he told the party the whole story, forgetting altogether that he was giving them an account of what was happening at the very moment.

Brought to Terms.

In the Drayton household it is said that the father of the family has a way of presenting alternatives to his children that never fails to bring them into line.

"I wish you would speak to Bobby," said Mrs. Drayton one night. "I've told him to take his medicine and then jump into bed, and he won't do it. He just hops around and says he doesn't want to take the medicine and he doesn't want to go to bed."

Mr. Drayton stepped to the door of Bobby's room and stood there, tall, grave and impressive.

"Bobby," he said firmly, "if you don't take your medicine at once and then jump into bed you will be put to bed, do you hear me, put to bed, without having your medicine at all."

Upon which Bobby, alarmed and confused, swallowed his allotted portion and meekly retired for the night.

"Scouring the Land."

I have just been examining an old book containing the accounts of the charity-estate of West Haddon, embracing the years 1773-1850. Under date Aug. 17, 1773, is the following entry:

"Paid Richard Worster seven days' work, cutting thorns and scouring and stoping of gaps, 10s. 6d."

The term "scouring the ditch" is used on Jan. 8, 1781, and appears many times after this date, the last instance being on April 28, 1820.—London Notes and Queries.

Justified.

"You are charged with having knocked your wife down, blacking both of her eyes and loosening two of her teeth. Have you anything to say for yourself?"

"She had it comin' to her, your honor."

"What did she do or say that could in any way justify such treatment on your part?"

"She said I didn't love her no more."

she was as formidable as she was attractive was soon demonstrated in a practical way. After cruising around a short time she captured three British vessels in succession, and then, with her prizes, she started to return to Philadelphia, but off the Delaware capes she encountered a British ship of the line. As the Saratoga carried only eighteen guns and the Intrepid was a seventy-four gun ship, Captain Young considered it safer to run away. The enemy did not chase her far, but returned to protect and recapture the British prizes. The Saratoga sailed away in the very teeth of a storm, and she was never heard from again.

A Futile Offer.

Nobody had ever accused Nathan Harlowe of indulging in romance or sentiment. When it came to a question of young Jared Parker's marrying one of Mr. Harlowe's daughters, the practical father was amazed to find how little influence his wisdom had.

"Got his mind all set on Phemie," Mr. Harlowe remarked in a dazed tone to one of his neighbors, "and I couldn't turn him no more'n I could turn an injine! I put it to him plain and offered him inducements, but 'twan't a mite o' use."

"Marthy's the oldest and ought to be married fust by rights," I said to him, "and, more'n that, she's a suitable height. You'd oughtn't to take a little short piece like Phemie, tall as you are!" But I couldn't convince him.

"I'm a-goin' to have Phemie and that mahogany bureau she's told me about," he says, laughing.

"Sakes alive, man!" I said to him. "There's two bureaus goes with Marthy, and maybe three!" But he just laughed and shook his head, so then I gave up contending with him once and for all. There's no reason to him."

London's Water Supply.

It has been calculated that if a cistern covering 850 acres and 345 feet high could be constructed and the water supply of London for one year turned into it the warships of all the world's navies could ride at anchor there. If we now dig a canal 100 feet wide across Europe, says Tit-Bits, from the extreme north to the south, and empty our cistern into it, we shall find that the water in our canal, which is 2,400 miles long, will rise to a uniform height of ten feet. Every drop of it is consumed by the inhabitants of greater London within a year, while each man, woman and child living today throughout the world could draw fifty gallons from it without exhausting its contents. The mains through which these hundreds of millions of tons of water flow for the use of London are almost long enough to stretch a quarter of the way around the earth at the equator, while it would take a locomotive traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour more than four days and nights to race from one end of them to the other.

THE MODERN BIG GUN

Its Making Involves a Sequence of Mechanical Wonders.

HOW ARTILLERY IS BUILT UP

Boring the Monster Tube, Wrapping on the Hundred Miles of Wire and Fitting the White Hot Steel Jacket on a Twelve Inch Weapon.

It takes a big thought to grasp the immensity of the famous Tyneside hive of industry, Elswick works, says the People's Journal. The area covered by this huge concern is equal to that of many a fair sized town. The employees, 20,000, are a whole population in themselves. For a full mile along the northern bank of the Tyne stretch workshop on workshop.

From the moment you put your foot inside the first department you realize you are in a veritable museum of mechanical wonders.

"Here is a gun being bored," your guide announces, and you accompany him over to the huge lathe to see the process and at the same time gather some vastly interesting information as to how artillery is built up.

One of the first things done to these ponderous weapons is the hollowing out of the bore. This, as may be imagined, is not the work of an hour. With the finest machinery in the world it required an average of eighteen days to pierce a ten yards long steel muzzle with a twelve inch bore, grooved slantwise.

To see the gun tube, weighing anything up to sixty tons, fixed into the lathe is itself most interesting. To manipulate the larger pieces two hydraulic cranes are used. These cranes work overhead and run on rollers bedded in the side supports. Electricity supplies the working power. With the huge load fixed, smoothly, almost silently, it is swung majestically into the air and carried along in whatever direction is required. Before you have done speculating as to what may happen if that mighty load comes crashing down on top of you you hear the order "Lower!" and down comes the sixty tons of steel with the ease and grace of sixty pounds of feathers. But a still greater marvel awaits you in the next department to which you are conducted. Here you learn something of the process of gun wrapping. The wire with which modern artillery is wrapped is of the finest steel, flat, like the mainspring of a clock, and a full hundred miles of it are required to wrap a twelve inch gun. The figures are somewhat surprising—wire enough to stretch in a straight line from Newcastle to Edinburgh used on one single cannon!

Wire seems a weak substance to use in connection with artillery. In point of fact wired guns are the strongest in existence. The rifled steel tube you saw in the department just left is capable of withstanding a pressure of forty-five tons; wired, the tensile resistance will equal 110 tons, and projectiles may be fired from it at the rate of three a minute without the slightest fear of the gun bursting.

The wire is wrapped on to the tube in the same way as thread is wound round a bobbin. The huge coil is fixed overhead, and as the powerful machinery revolves layer after layer is wound round the gun tant as if cast on and smooth and level as veneering. Think of it! One hundred miles of steel wire, springy as quicksilver, guided automatically by machinery, and a

INTENSIFIED FRUIT AN IMPROV

A Discovery that is Re

Remarkable Success Attend Medicinal Compound by
of Apples, Oranges,

Fruit helps to keep one healthy. Fruit, in itself, will not cure disease. The medicinal principle—or that part of fruit which has a curative effect—is in such infinitesimal quantities, that it is unable to overcome a diseased condition of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys or skin.

Just here is where science stepped in. An Ottawa physician did what nature could not do. He first found that some fruits were stronger medicinally than others—and that apples, oranges, figs and prunes contained all the healing properties of other fruits. There are two principles in fruit juices—bitter and sweet. After extracting the juices of the four fruits mentioned, this physician succeeded in replacing one atom of the sweet principle by one of the bitter. This resulted in an entirely new combination being formed. This new compound was many times more

Dyspepsia of Women

Caused by Female Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has a peculiar tonic effect on the female organism.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Henry Beaubien, 58 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ont., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"I had been troubled with indigestion and general stomach disorders for nearly a year. I had a soreness in my stomach and was unable to digest my food. I dieted and doctored without success, until Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me permanent relief. I used three bottles and it cured me of my stomach trouble and built up my general health. I now enjoy a splendid appetite, can eat all kinds of food, and feel like a new woman."

CULTURE

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

-The Company's Guarantee-

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles (hair roots), with out restoring to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. In or on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would do it and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. V. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

Regent House, Regent Street, London, W.

round a bobby. The huge coil is fixed overhead, and as the powerful machinery revolves layer after layer is wound round the gun taut as if cast on and smooth and level as veneering. Think of it! One hundred miles of steel wire, springy as quicksilver, guided automatically by machinery, and a strand lapping by the thousandth part of an inch!

Even now, however, that gun is in quite an embryo stage. It has about a dozen further processes to go through before it is ready to hand over to the government—that has ordered it or sent to the stock room, where many hundreds of guns of all sizes and patterns are kept ready for immediate sale to anybody wanting them.

You leave the turning shop and presently find yourself in front of what your guide declares to be furnaces, but which you think would be better described as infernos. You are surprised to learn that these furnaces are heated by gas, and on inquiring the reason you are told that it is for the sake of purity and cleanliness. The grif and dirt from any kind of fuel would ruin the work done at these furnaces. And what is that work? Putting on the outer jacket of the gun—just a little matter to buoy up those miles of wire and inches of forged steel within that again.

Presently there is a commotion. Something opens somewhere. There is a terrific glare, and the temperature goes suddenly up to—well, something rather warm. Then a crane is set in motion, something you can faintly see grips something else you don't wish to look at—it is so suggestive of the sun within ten yards of you—and before you well know what it all means the white hot steel jacket is being fitted on the gun barrel reared alongside. When that jacket cools it will fit considerably tighter than the garments of a growing boy, though that is an afterthought which comes to you when you have got into cooler regions. Interesting as it is, the process of investing a gun with its jacket is too sultry for the unprepared visitors to stand much of, and you hasten outside to where goggles and leg pads are not necessary.

A gun complete, with all its fixings exactly as if it were in a fort or aboard a ship, is awaiting your inspection. If you did not know before that a modern gun is a marvel, you certainly grasp that fact now. When you have finished wondering and admiring you ask for figures and particulars. You learn that the gun is a twelve-inch one; its length, with the breech piece, is forty-five feet; its total weight, with all its mountings, 450 tons.

All you see from the outside of the steel shell tower is the long muzzle pointing suggestively out of the forward embrasure. The armor plating of these walls of steel varies in thickness from eight to twelve inches. You enter the stronghold by a heavy steel door in the rear. You now observe that the gun is erected on supports over a pit thirty-five or forty feet deep. This pit exactly corresponds with the position the gun will occupy when mounted aboard ship. The machinery you see at the rear of the gun is an ammunition hoist and hydraulic apparatus for working the gun. As you contemplate there you can scarcely help wondering how warriors got along in the days of ramrods, lanyards and cannon balls less in size than the average turnip. But mark the marvels of modern gunnery! You touch a handle, and, with an ease that astounds you, down drops the muzzle of the mammoth piece. You release another handle, and, with the simplest possible movement so far as you are concerned, the entire gun mountings begin to revolve in a circle. A similar simple touch will send the huge projectile on its journey of four or five miles to strike and pierce twelve inch armor plate.

general stomach disorders for nearly a year. I had a soreness in my stomach and was unable to digest my food. I dieted and was disappointed without success; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me permanent relief. I used three bottles and it cured me of my stomach trouble and built up my general health. I now enjoy a splendid appetite, can eat all kinds of food, have no trouble with indigestion, and I now that I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Hydraulics," your guide laconically explains, "Magic" fits in better with your private ideas. Even the ammunition hoist works automatically. Should a shot unfortunately damage its mechanism it can still be worked by hand. A miracle of mechanics, a wonder of adaptation!

A Hard Shot.

Among the stories told of Dr. Emmons, a well known clergyman of a former day and generation, there are many which show his keen wit. In the town where he was pastor there lived a physician who was a pantheist and took pains to let every one know it. He had made frequent boast that he could easily conquer Dr. Emmons in argument, and one day came his chance. He and the doctor met at the house of a sick man.

"How old are you, sir?" asked the physician brusquely.

"Sixty-two," replied Dr. Emmons quietly, although his eyes showed his surprise. "May I ask your age in turn?"

"I've been alive since the creation in one form or another," said the physician curtly.

"Ah, then I suppose you were with Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden?" inquired the doctor.

"Certainly," came the reply.

"Uah!" said Dr. Emmons placidly, meditating on the other's face. "I always thought there was a third person there, but some have differed from me."

active medicinally than the fruit juices.
Where eating fruit only helped to keep one well, this compound actually cured disease.

To make it more valuable still, this physician added the finest tonics and antiseptics, and then, by evaporating the entire compound to a powder, made it into tablets.

This, in short, is the method of making "Fruit-a-tives"—these wonderful tablets—the most reliable cure for Constipation, Biliousness, Stomach Troubles, Kidney and Bladder Disease and Skin Affections. Being made from fruit, "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken by women and children without fear of ill-effect.

HAMLET'S TOMB.

The Memorial at Elsinore Is a Standing Joke.

The English pressmen traveling in Denmark have been taken to Elsinore.
They looked in vain for its "wild and stormy steep," as for the battlement where a famous ghost appeared. It is not that these poetic scenes have vanished. They never were extant. On the other hand, says the Pall Mall Gazette, our confreres saw the tomb of Hamlet. This must have consoled them unless they were so injudicious as to ask questions, and for most it had the charm of surprise also. That Hamlet was buried under a cross of stone in the public garden of Marienlyst rinks among things not generally known. But there's no doubt about it for guileless persons who believe the evidence of their own eyes. If the cross is broken and the inscription nearly effaced, those effects of age go to prove its authenticity, if proof can be needed. The record of the year also is lost, but we still trace the day of the month, Oct. 22, which harmonizes with the well known eccentricity of the deceased in a very pleasing manner.

Some worthy souls, Danish as English, indignantly protest against this standing joke, perpetrated or at least sanctioned by the municipal authorities.
But the wise know that the vulgar person loves to be deceived, and in charity they conclude—despairing! No harm comes of the jest and some easy laughter. Hans Andersen, who told so many fables, left an account of this. He went to school at Elsinore in the twenties and thirties of the last century.
The precious tomb had not been invented or thought of then. But at this port the famous sound dues were collected, and every vessel had to stop at Elsinore. They were British mostly, and skippers, passengers, even crew, says Hans Andersen, pestered the inhabitants with questions about Hamlet, prince of Denmark. There was and is a small harbor in the garden of a handsome villa just outside

"Then," said Methuselah, "it is not worth while to build a house."

By this token Methuselah proved himself a pessimist. To Azrael a thousand years may be as yesterday, but it is not for us to follow the example of our antediluvian forefather and view existence through the eyes of death. Every moment added to our earthly tenure is regarded as that much again. The monk Hildesheim, listening to God in the melody of a bird for a space of three minutes, found that in those three minutes 300 years had flown. And so to each of us life means always the possibility of joy and revelation unmeasured by time or space. Therefore let us bargain with death. True, he will claim us at last, but we shall have had the better of the bargain.—Lippincott's.

What Is Happiness?

"What is happiness?" asks James Bryce in the Atlantic. "Is it pleasure, and, if so, what is pleasure? Aristotle gave us a definition of pleasure, or, rather, perhaps a description, since the logicians say that you cannot define an ultimate fact which has not been much improved upon. It is not, however, psychological definitions that need concern us, but rather this question, which occupied the utilitarian school seventy years ago, whether the pleasures taken in the aggregate as constituting happiness are to be subjected to a qualitative as well as a quantitative analysis. Shall we measure them by the intensity by which they are felt or by the fineness and elevation of the feeling to which they appeal? Is the satisfaction which Pericles felt in watching the performance of a drama of Sophocles at an Athenian festival greater or less than the satisfaction which one of his slaves felt in obtaining a jar of wine?"

ICEBERGS.

They Are Useful as Well as Grand and Menacing.

When an iceberg is launched upon its long journey its bottom parts are barnacled with sand, boulders and other detritus gathered from the land surface over which it has made its tedious march to the sea. This burden is gradually cast off as it melts while drifting down along our continental shelf.

As a result of the deposits thus made through countless centuries, combined with the products of erosion carried seaward by the rivers, the sea bed for many miles off shore has been gradually filled up, creating those vast submerged plateaus, known as "banks," which extend from Labrador to the bay of Fundy and form the breeding grounds of innumerable shoals of cod, herring and other valuable food fishes.
In this way the bergs have performed an economic service of incalculable value, laying the foundation for one of the world's most important productive industries and affording a means of livelihood to those hardy bands of "captains courageous" who each year reap the harvest of the sea.

The bergs serve a further economic purpose in that to their tempering influences are largely due the climatic conditions prevailing over a great part of the interior of North America.—Alfred Sidney Johnson in the World To-

A Case of Dreadful Suffering Which Had Continued For Months.

An Account of a Remarkable Recovery Given By Mr. Alfred Wood, Teacher of a Private School at Launceston, Tasmania.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED WOOD.

Mr. Alfred Wood, who has a private school at 22 Frederick street, Lan-ceston, Tasmania (Australia), has been a teacher for 37 years under the Educational Department of Tasmania. He writes, concerning his wife's case, as follows:

"My wife was suffering for months from gastro-enteritis, and was given up by her medical attendant.

"By good fortune I was induced to try Peruna in her case, and I can truthfully state that from the first dose her dreadful suffering ceased; and after taking five bottles she is permanently cured."

HOW does Peruna make such extraordinary cures as above recited?

By simply arousing the forces of Nature to throw off the diseased action.

Peruna contains no magic and does not operate in any mysterious way, but it does help Nature to combat disease, and thus many times comes to the rescue of the patient in some important crisis.

There is always a time in the course of any disease when a little help goes a great way.

Just as the scales are beginning to descend, when one ounce more would determine the fate of the patient, a little lift will turn the scales in favor of the patient.

Peruna is a handy medicine to have in the household.

It helps many diseases by imparting a natural vigor to the whole system.

As a tonic or catarrh remedy, its reputation is well established all over the world.

As a remedy for stomach and bowel disease, the fame of Peruna is undoubtedly destined to become greater than that of any other medicine in the world.

A great many cases like that above referred to have found Peruna of untold value when no other help seemed of any avail.

Pe-ru-na For Indigestion.

Mr. Donald Robb, Jr., 16 Wrights
Ave., Halifax, Nova Scotia, member Independent Order of Forresters, writes:
"While on a visit to Boston, I must have eaten something that did not agree with my stomach, as a terrible case of indigestion followed.

"Peruna was recommended to me and after using three bottles I was entirely cured.

"I therefore recommend Peruna to any one suffering with stomach trouble."

Mr. Chas. Brown, Rogersville, Tenn., writes:

"A friend advised me to take Peruna for indigestion and it cured me in a short time."

An Astute Astronomer.

Cassini, an Italian by birth, was the best known of the astronomers of the Paris observatory when founded by Louis XIV., and in consequence posterity has very generally supposed he was the director. That he failed to be such was not from any want of astuteness. It is related that the monarch once visited the observatory to see a newly discovered comet through the telescope. He inquired in what direction the comet was going to move.
This was a question it was impossible to answer at the moment, because both observations and computations would be necessary before the orbit could be worked out. But Cassini reflected that the king would not look at the comet again and would very soon forget what he had told him. He therefore described its future path in the heavens quite at random and with entire confidence that any deviation of the actual motion from his prediction

In Time of Trouble.

That the folds of Old Glory afford good shelter in any land is the obvious point of this New York Times story:

During one of the frequent revolutions in Haiti a party of Americans made a riding tour of the mountains.
One morning a member of the party suddenly drew rein with an ejaculation and pointed to a lone ridge where an old tattered stars and stripes fluttered on a bamboo pole.

"We must pay our respects," some one said.

After some search they found a path that zigzagged up to the wild place.
They followed it and at last discovered an aged negro sitting before his watted hut smoking his pipe, while he kept an eye on the flag.

"What's the flag for?" some one asked.

"Protection," said the old man quietly. "I heah dey done begin anudder lected, and every vessel had to stop at Elshore. They were British mostly, and 'skippers, passengers, even crew, says Hans Andersen, pestered the inhabitants with questions about Hamlet, prince of Denmark. There was and is a small barrow in the garden of a handsome villa just outside the town. Some humorist told the inquiring Britons that this was Hamlet's grave. They straggled thither daily, and the householder, a merchant, dared not be rude to his best clients. But the persecution became unbearable, and at length he conceived the happy thought of setting up a real tomb, with an epitaph, on a bit of waste land in the neighborhood. The diversion answered perfectly. Afterward this waste land was included in the public garden of Marienlyst.

TRY TO LIVE LONG.

Bargain With Death and Win All the Years You Can.

No one of us is so poor or so unworthy that he is not ready to bargain with death. Let the specter name his price and we give up our loves and our tobacco with equal promptness. He may have our fortunes and our homes, our pride and our achievements and aspirations—yea, even our eyes and ears—if he will but smile upon our prayers. Let him so command and we will abide in the wilderness, we will find comfort in husks, we will lie down with the beasts of the field. Better even a browsing Nebuchadnezzar than a moldering Hercules.

It is needless to tell us that death is an arch grafter. We know with whom we are dealing, and we know, too, that he grins in his sleeve at our eagerness to delay the inevitable. What to him are ten more years or fifty years or fifty centuries? Had Sargon, the mighty ruler of the Babylonian world, secured a respite of 5,000 years he would even so have been in his grave for more than a century when Richard of England led the crusaders to the walls of Jerusalem.

An old legend tells us that when Methuselah was 500 years old an angel came to him and advised him to build a house instead of living in the open air, as he had been doing up to that time. The patriarch asked how much longer he had to live. "About 500 years," answered the angel.

A TOOTH FOR A TOOTH.

The Forcefulness of Native Customs In Morocco.

In Morocco, the Baled-el-Maghrab (the land of the setting sun of the Arabs), the Lex Talionis is as much an integral part of the social system as are life and death. The Moors, it may be said, are frankly brutal. They have a certain rude code of honor to which they adhere when convenient, but among themselves they devise every possible excuse for not fulfilling engagements with the glaiour.

On the other hand, they are extremely punctilious in exacting full measure from Europeans with whom they have dealings, and many stories might be told showing how Moorish judges mete out justice to their own people to the detriment of the alien.

For instance, it is not very long since that a British subject riding through the Soko (or market place) at Marakesh had the ill fortune to push against a half blind old woman, who, falling to the ground, broke off two of her front teeth.

The Englishman promptly offered compensation. It was refused, and the injured woman before the local caid demanded that her innocent aggressor should have two teeth knocked out in retribution for her injury.

Protest followed on protest against this exaction until finally the matter was carried to the sultan himself.

That potentate (and this instance is given to show the forcefulness of native custom) begged the Englishman to comply with the old woman's demand and publicly sacrifice his incisors, in return for which oblation he granted him concessions which have made that English merchant and his family foremost among the wealthy foreigners in Morocco.—London Spectator.

could be worked out. But Cassini reflected that the king would not look at the comet again and would very soon forget what he had told him. He therefore described its future path in the heavens quite at random and with entire confidence that any deviation of the actual motion from his prediction would never be noted by his royal patron.

A MAN'S REVENGE;

"Come, sir," repeated the servant, taking his arm.

"Yes, yes! I come, Simmons. What a deuced hurry you're in. Don't you see my nephew, curse you? He's staying in the village. Well, Duncan, good-bye, my boy. I don't ask you to share my solitude for I sought it with the desire of hugging it to my breast. But all the same, if sometimes you'll look me up I'll be glad to see you. You remind me of what I once was before darkness descended on me. Good-bye, my boy. May you find your art worthy of all your devotion."

Duncan wrung the thin hand with an uneasy feeling of tenderness, for he had a tender corner in his heart for this strangely afflicted uncle of his. The remembrance of kindnesses received in childhood days, of the handsome laughing face, had not faded away entirely.

He turned to the village, pondering deeply on the strange illness that had made the lively, dashing youth a mindless man. It was fifteen years ago that the malady had attacked Ralph Freer, and all one knew of it was that he had been found in an unconscious condition in the lowest quarter of Nunchester. How he had got there no one knew. He himself, on recovery, could not tell, for on statement of the fever that held him in its throes for many days his mind had gone completely. He was a helpless babe, babbling and chuddish once more.

Duncan remembered all that plainly, for he was then a boy of twelve, and the injured man had been nursed at his home. He recalled the ominous whispers he had heard, of the strange coincidence of his uncle's illness, dating from the first appearance in public of the woman he had loved, as the affianced bride of Lord Cruse at the Nunchester Hunt Ball, and the mysterious disappearance of that woman's only child, a little girl of three. Long after the Assembly Rooms had closed on that fateful night Ralph Freer was found insensible and robbed. At the same time the search for the missing child had begun, but the cloud had never risen from him. Despite every effort for recovery the lost child had not been found. The queries as to her disappearance remained unanswered. Had Ralph known anything about it? None could tell. Had he himself spirited her away from a mad sense of revenge? No one knew. What seemed most probable to all was, that he had pursued the kidnapper and met his fate in trying to rescue the child.

At all events his life was ruined. His memory had fled; he had forgotten everything that had happened since his vision of the woman he adored. At last he was almost mad and had to be kept under restraint. Everything that had to be done for him was done. He went abroad to return half dazed and broken spirited. The very mention of the woman he had loved called anger to his eyes, and set his nerves on fire.

Duncan's face darkened as he thought, then softened again, for he knew Lady Cruse, and had for her the devotion of a young man for a noble-hearted woman. Besides, had she not suffered atrociously herself. With a little shiver he recalled the terrible meeting she had had with the convalescent man, when she had implored him to remember, to tell what he knew. He had seen her kneeling before his uncle, her beautiful eyes streaming. The look of despair with which she had passed him on her way out after the fruitless interview chapter. Bill would black the eyes of any who brought a cloud to her face. But I'm worrying you with my talk. I'll fetch your tea in."

Duncan glanced round the cosy little room with a smile.

"Well," he reflected, "I may have come to a dull place, but I've had plenty of events crowded into my life since my arrival. Sunbeam—Sunbeam's father—my Uncle Ralph. I wonder how many more surprises I'm to get, and if any of them will lead to adventure of any kind."

CHAPTER V.

"What are you going to do with yourself now, Bill?" asked his sister a few days later as he sat silent in the little kitchen. The man took his pipe from his mouth and grinned cunningly.

"That's just wot I was deliberatin' on, Hetty. You know yourself that I never 'ave worked by the sweat of my brow, nor never shall. I ain't such a greenhorn yet. I was just thinkin' over one or two jobs when you spoke. Likely as not I shall only be a few days 'ere. Villages ain't the best place for my sort. Towns are more 'orspitable."

Hetty put down the saucepan she had been cleaning and came close up to him. Her round eyes held a world of inquiry, her full cheeks had paled.

"You don't mean to say that you're off' again. Remember your hand has lost its cunning, Bill. For my sake don't be rash. Remember me and her."

"Just becuz I do remember you I must make plans. You can't starve. An honest work don't pay. What could I do if I did. Who'd 'ave me, eh?" sneered Bill, plunging his hands into his pockets and sucking his pipe.

She sighed. Ready tears sprang to her eyes.

"You've grown soft, Het; soft and flabby. Why do you want to starve?"

"My savings will last many years," she murmured, bending over the fire. He chuckled, amused.

"Your savings were mine! You don't mind that money, then?"

"Of course not," she exclaimed, indignantly; "I'm with you, as before. No, it isn't that. It's because your luck's gone, and also because of Sunbeam. She takes that to heart. She's as good as gold, you see."

"Oh, that's it, is it? I'd like to know where she'd be if I felt as good as gold myself. As for my luck, that's rot! It'll come back. If it doesn't, and she gets on your mind, you know wot to do. For goodness' sake don't turn into a crying female. Sunbeam ought to know better than to talk like that."

"Yet she loves you, Bill. Her heart is true to you. But she prays that your ways may change. It's real anusin' to hear her sometimes, her that owes all to your ways."

Her eyes streamed with tears of mirth. Bill's face softened intensely.

"Yes, she's cunning," he muttered, chewing the pipe stem to keep it from falling, "and beautiful too. I thought, Het; praps too beautiful for what I want."

"For what you want? Bill, what d'you mean? You ain't going to corrupt that child's mind, the child wot's been a heaver to us both?"

He twisted round uneasily in his chair. All softening expressions slid from his face. His mouth set in a hard, cruel line.

"Bill, you ain't goin' to—," began the woman. But he checked her with a frown, exclaiming angrily:

"I reverence for him had received their death blow the night before. Her heart was aching with anger for her disloyalty to the man, and at the same time she felt herself envying the smallest village child whose father's hands were simply soiled with honest labor."

"Oh, for a clean name!" she had sighed, wiping away her blinding tears. Therefore contrition for her lack of pride in a man who evidently was devoid of shame, made her more willing to bear with his temper, more anxious to atone for her shortcomings. At the kitchen door she kissed her aunt again, whispering in her ear:

"I'll be patient, don't worry!"

The next moment she turned, smiling, to her father.

"Do you want me, dear?" she asked, meeting his angry eyes unflinchingly. "Yes," he growled, his expression softening nevertheless, for he loved her as much as he could love any one. "I want to talk over one or two matters. For my stay in this 'ole won't be a long one. An' in a cardboard 'ouse like this 'is as well to talk business when no one else is in it."

Sunbeam nodded her head. There was something in his face and voice she had neither seen nor heard before. What could he have to say? Was he meditating some fresh burglary? A shiver ran through her.

"Sunbeam, you can't say I've bin a bad father to you?"

She started. Love sprang to her face. She took his roughened hand.

"You have been the best of fathers. I thank you from the bottom of my heart," she whispered in a low voice, pressing her soft lips to the horny skin. He glanced triumphantly at his sister, exclaiming in an exultant tone:

"Then as I've won such gratitude, Sunbeam, you can't refuse to be a doctin' daughter?"

"Of course not! Have I ever been anything but dutiful?"

"I'm goin' to let you be so, more, by asking you to do a simple thing for me. Mind you, a thing no good girl would refuse to do for a parent wot 'as risked even his neck for her."

The girl's eyes widened, her lips grew dry. A pang of fear shot through her heart. What could it be? She glanced at her aunt. The woman sat as though turned to stone, a mortal dread in her eyes. The sight was not reassuring, but Sunbeam was plucky.

"What is it, father?" she asked, smiling sweetly at him. "To hear your voice, and see Aunt Hetty's face. I might imagine something terrible! But I'm sure it cannot be that."

"Of course not," he retorted gruffly, turning his eyes away. "You've been well educated an' I want you to help me to do one or two jobs, this way. You're to git into the places as governess or anything you like, visitor if you can, and—"

But a low exclamation drove the words from his lips. Sunbeam was standing before him with a horror-stricken face.

"Oh, father, stop. Don't! Anything but that! I cannot do it! Don't be angry with me, but I cannot do this thing you ask."

"You cannot! But you must. I'm your father an' you must obey. Where's the 'arm?' Ain't you been educated on money got that way. Ain't you livin' on it now? What's your aunt's savin's but her share out of my kootin', eh?" he exclaimed brutally, though his eyes were still averted from the quivering pleading face.

"Oh, Aunt Hetty! Is it true?" she faltered, turning despairingly to the other woman who was weeping silently, with furtive glances at her brother's bullet-shaped head as she sat behind him.

"My darling, yes! Forgive me, I never told you, but yes, it's true."

"True that all your money that bought this, and feeds us, is ill-gotten? Oh, Auntie, when you saw how distressed I was to hear how my education had been paid for, why did you keep this from me?"

"Because I was afraid you'd leave me, maybe, you seemed so dead set against such doings," sobbed Hetty.

Sunbeam sighed.

"As a child I never knew. Until the villagers began to scoff I was kept in ignorance. Off, father, what have you done? It would have been better to let me die like my poor mother."

But Green sprang to his feet. His

FARMERS ARE SMILING!

EXTRAORDINARY YIELD IN WESTERN WINTER WHEAT BELT.

Crop Failures Are Unknown—Remarkable Expansion in the Acreage Sown in Fall.

In view of the very great interest manifested in the wheat crop of 1907, some inquiries made by a special correspondent of The Edmonton Bulletin into the grain crop of southern Alberta, the winter wheat region, are of special value, because they prove that the growth of winter wheat in Canada is certain before long to prove immensely valuable to the country. The correspondent began his work at Pincher Creek, where the general estimated average was thirty bushels to the acre, while as high as fifty was expected in some instances.

NO FAILURE IN TWENTY YEARS.

Pincher is the birthplace of winter wheat in western Canada, and the success that has accompanied its growth there is pleasing to the Pincherites. One farmer of the district says that in twenty years he has never thrashed less than forty bushels per acre, and often as high as sixty bushels. One settler grew as much as 376 bushels off nine acres, and the ground was measured. One illustration of the rapid increase in acreage is given in the fact that in the Fiskwin locality one small horsepower outfit was sufficient to thrash all the grain grown in the district within a radius of twenty miles. This year there are five steam threshing outfits in the same area, and they will all be busy.

The correspondent then went on to Cardston, and from that place he reports that at Cardston and Raymond there is no crop shortage, either in acreage or yield. To-day the Cardston farmers are reaping the best crop known in the history of the district. An authority said:—"If we take reasonable care in preparing the soil and seeding we never fear a failure."

ALBERTA RED THE FAVORITE.

The bulk of the crop here is winter wheat, chiefly Alberta red. Some spring wheat is also sown. As in all parts of the fall wheat belt in Alberta this year, the winter crops came through in splendid condition. The tall, clean, heavy-headed stalks, to be seen in a day's travel through thousands of acres of uncut fields and stooks stoutly attest to the statement that the crop is a healthy, clean crop and a high-grade sample. One observer says that the crop is as far advanced here as in the famous Cache county, Utah, long celebrated as one of the best wheat sections of the United States. The same is true of the crops at Spring Coulee, Raley and Magrath. Many farms visited by the correspondent will have from thirty-five to fifty bushels per acre. Five farmers in one neighborhood place this crop at 100,000 bushels, and an estimate placed on the yield that will be produced tributary to the Cardston elevator is 350,000 bushels; while Spring Coulee, Raley and Magrath will produce 300,000 bushels more. A few poor fields will yield about twenty bushels, but these are exceptional. A visit to this district was recently paid by Prof. TenEyck of the Kansas State College. He declared the crops were without exception the best he had ever seen.

FLOUR AND SUGAR.

At Raymond (Alberta) the correspondent took particular pains to inquire into all the conditions, and his report from there is of a highly satisfactory character. His article written from this point states:—"Wheat and beef—flour and sugar. These are the great raw products and staple manufactures of this thriving town. The country on each side of the A. R. & I. Railway from Raymond to Cardston and Kimball is practically one continuous wheatfield. The crop is a bumper one; and in several places is phenomenal and a certain record-breaker. It is impossible for crops to grow thicker than stretches that are hundreds of acres in extent." Tersely cision in Geneva, then to the Board of Trade, to be compared with the instrument already there, and finally to the Mist, whence it has just returned. Every year for the next ten years it will be further examined. If it varies by a millionth of an inch it will be rejected, otherwise it will become a standard.

TERRORIST-OUTRAGES.

Tales of Blood Come From Various Parts of Russia.

From various points reports have been received at St. Petersburg of murders and acts of violence by terrorists or peasants.

A Tiflis despatch says that the body of Prince Tzereteli, a cousin of Prince I. G. Tzereteli, member of the former Duma from Kutais, was found hacked to pieces in the suburbs of Gori. The police have evidence that the crime was committed by peasants.

Captain Lilin was shot down and killed in Sevastapol by an unknown man as he was stepping out of his house. The assassin escaped.

The home of Baroness Alshenvog, in Peltava, was set on fire by peasants and totally destroyed.

Thirty-six political prisoners broke out of the prison at Kutais on Friday and got away. They had been incarcerated in secret cells for over a year.

The cholera at Kiev, in Russia, shows no signs of diminishing, but on the contrary it is spreading steadily. Every province that suffered from famine last year is now in the grasp of the scourge and every day hundreds of new cases are reported.

FROST AND FLOWERS.

Man, in his attempts to guide nature to his own ends and purposes, has never better succeeded than in his dealings with flowers. He has almost changed them at his will, giving them shapes, colors, and even seasons, to suit himself. Recently the new methods of producing artificial cold have been taken advantage of in floriculture to retard the blooming of flowers, as well as to preserve them after being cut. Interesting experiments have been made at Dijon, France, by Monsieur Verrier, using the cold-storage room of an abattoir and the cellar of a brewery. Not only the temperature but the amount of moisture in the air have to be taken into account. On the average, a temperature of 36° Fahrenheit served best for both cut and growing flowers. An azalea in bud was kept 50 days in a latent state, after which the temperature being increased, it bloomed for a month. Hyacinths and Bengal roses were similarly treated. Cut flowers were kept in excellent condition for two and three months. The ultimate aim of the experiments is to enable the floriculturist to make his plants bloom much according to his pleasure.

FRANCE FIGHTS OPIUM.

Officials Warned That Use of the Drug Will Stop Promotion.

One result of France's acquisition of colonies in the Far East has been the development of the opium habit among the officers. A score of opium dens existed in Toulon and other naval ports. These have now been stamped out or only exist in a clandestine fashion.

The Colonial Minister has now followed the lead of the Minister of Marine, and issued a regulation that they expect officials in the colonies to show a good example to the natives. If, therefore, he hears that any official is addicted to the opium habit his promotion will be stopped until he hears that he has reformed.

A DREAM.

Wishing to learn what his nephew would say, Uncle Charles asked him Fred, "What would you do if you stood at the foot of a tree with your feet on the head of a live rattlesnake, a tiger was crouching on a branch above ready to spring, and you saw a wild Indian running at you with uplifted tomahawk?"

"I should wake right up," was the unexpected reply.

lams. On one occasion a young farmer, new to the district, who had taken a small holding not far from that of the old man, perceived a shabby figure leaning against the gate on the edge of his property and said, "Hi, old man! Do you want some work?"

The wearer of a shabby sheepskin took his long pipe out of his mouth and nodded gravely.

"Well, you can come along to-morrow and look after some of my sheep. Bring any of your bits of things or animals with you; there's plenty of room on my farm."

The next day, as the young farmer walked across his fields, he saw a cloud of dust coming up the road. Presently there emerged from it a herd of cows, horses and sheep—hundreds of animals with their driver. The cavalcade swept past the astonished man. Behind it came a huge wagon, creaking and groaning, laden with heavy furniture, in the front of which sat his shabby acquaintance of the day before.

"You told me to bring my animals and bits of things," said the old man, "and here we are."

TENANTS MUST MARRY.

No Small Holdings for Bachelors at Moulton.

A remarkable feature in connection with the extension of the small holdings movement in Lincolnshire is an agreement adopted at Moulton, near Spalding, England, where the tenants on taking up land have to bind themselves to marriage within "a reasonable time."

The Clerk of Moulton Parish Council stated the other day that the project is one associated with the name of Earl Carrington, and that a corn farm of 4750 acres is to be cut up into small holdings. Thirteen houses will be provided, and it is these that the Parish Council require shall be occupied either by married couples or by tenants who intend to marry.

There has been a large number of applications for the holdings, and although possession has not yet been given, the tenants have been chosen. Six of them are eligible bachelors, who under the arrangement come to will have to provide themselves with wives shortly.

Of the six selected bachelors or bachelors some are already engaged to be married, but special interest is being taken with regard to two of those still free. They are currently reported to be searching diligently for suitable partners.

Get Your Roofs Shingled Right It's Less Money and Less Work

You can put on a roof that will last a hundred years and be the right kind of a roof every minute. Or you can put on a ten-year roof that will probably leak after the first rain hits it, and keep leaking till it is rotted away.

Either roof will cost you about the same in money at the start. But the "Oshawa" shingled roof will be FIRE-PROOF—literally, and wind-proof—actually; and lightning-proof—positively. That's the hundred-year roof! And that "Oshawa" shingled roof will be weather-proof for a century. We'll GUARANTEE in every way for a quarter-century—from now till Nineteen-Thirty-Two.

Guaranteed in writing for 25 years—and you needn't ever paint it, even! That's saying something, isn't it? What would your mill-man say if you asked him to guarantee cedar shingles for even ten years? He certainly would make remarks! And even the best cedar-shingled roof will be leaking badly inside of ten years. Seven out of ten of them leak the first time it rains. No wood-shingled roof is fire-proof for a minute, and the first high wind that catches a loose shingle—woohoo! goes half your shingled roof over into the next township.

Yet cedar shingles cost you just about the price of these guaranteed "Oshawa" Shingles—28-gauge toughened steel, double galvanized—good for a century, guaranteed in writing till 1932, fire- and wind- and weather-proof and lightning-proof. Four-dollars-and-a-half a square buys "Oshawa" Galvanized Steel Shingles ten feet by ten feet. Compare that with the present price of cedar shingles—how does it strike you? And you can put on these "Oshawa" Galvanized Steel Shingles yourself, easily, with no tools but a claw-hammer and snips. Simplest thing you know—can't get 'em on wrong. "Oshawa" Shingles lock on all four sides—whole roof is practically one sheet of double-galvanized steel, that never needs painting.

And GUARANTEED—don't overlook that. Guaranteed in writing, over the seal of a company with a quarter-million capital, guaranteed in plain English, without any ifs or buts, for 25 long years. That's the argument in a nutshell—cost the same as wood-shingles; fire-proof, water-proof, rust-proof, lightning-proof; easier to put on; and GUARANTEED. That's the "Oshawa" proposition! Tell us the measurement of any roof, and we'll tell you exactly what it will cost to roof it with less work and for less money.

Plenty of facts that concern your pocket-book come to you as soon as you ask for our free book, "Roofing Right." A post card will do to ask on.

You can put on a roof that will last a hundred years and be the right kind of a roof every minute. Or you can put on a ten-year roof that will probably leak after the first rain hits it, and keep leaking till it is rotted away.

Either roof will cost you about the same in money at the start. But the "Oshawa"-shingled roof will be FIRE-PROOF—literally, and wind-proof—actually; and lightning-proof—positively. That's the hundred-year roof! And that "Oshawa"-shingled roof will be weather-proof for a century. We'll GUARANTEE in every way for a quarter-century—from now till Nineteen-Thirty-Two.

Guaranteed in writing for 25 years—and you needn't ever paint it, even! That's saying something, isn't it? What would your mill-man say if you asked him to guarantee cedar shingles for even ten years? He certainly would make remarks! And even the best cedar-shingled roof will be leaking badly inside of ten years. Seven out of ten of them leak the first time it rains. No wood-shingled roof is fire-proof for a minute, and the first high wind that catches a loose shingle—woohoo! goes half your shingled roof over into the next township.

FALLING FLOORS BURIES FIVE

Tons of Castings Fell on the Heads of Workmen Beneath.

A despatch from Oshawa says: As a result of an accident which happened at the works of the Oshawa Steam and Gas Fittings Company on Thursday morning, one man is dead, one probably fatally injured, and several others are more or less seriously injured. On the second flat of the building, at the west end, is the store room for small fittings, and in here was stored tons of these articles. The weight was more than the floor could stand and it gave way, emptying the contents on to the heads of several men at work in the mill room below, completely burying them with iron and broken timbers,

The accident happened about ten o'clock, and it was not until noon that the last of the unfortunate men were released. There were five in the wreck, Harvey Perkins, Wm. Jones, Thos. Allman, W. Russell and T. Lewis. Perkins was dead when removed, and from the ugly wound on his head, must have been killed instantly. Jones is so badly injured that he is not likely to recover. The others are not very seriously injured.

Perkins was born and brought up in Oshawa, where his parents still reside. He leaves a widow and two small children.

Thanksgiving Feast

Instead of basting the turkey frequently, modern cooks use a covered roaster, which performs basting automatically by the condensation of the steam. All the rich juices are thus saved, enhancing the flavor of the perfectly cooked fowl.

Up-to-date Soup.—To four pounds of beef (1½ lb. bone) covered with 2 quarts of cold water, seasoned with 1½ teaspoons of salt, 10 peppercorns, 4 cloves, quarter of a sweet pepper, 1½ teaspoons sweet herbs (marjoram, thyme, etc.), 1 bay leaf, 1½ tablespoons each carrot, onion and celery. After long simmering, never reaching the boiling point, strain the soup. The next morning remove the cake of fat formed on top and clear it by adding the slightly-beaten white of an egg and the crushed shell, heat constantly stirring, until the liquid boils. Let it boil vigorously a few moments, add ½ cup of cold water and remove to back of range for 5 minutes. Skim carefully, and strain through cheesecloth spread over a sieve or colander. A few minutes before serving add 2 tablespoons tapioca previously soaked in a little cold water; let boil and serve. Soup for holidays when several courses follow, should merely refresh and stimulate the appetite.

Potato and Walnut Stuffing.—This delicious filling is appropriate for either turkey or goose. Two cups hot mashed potato, 1 teaspoon onion juice or grated onion, ½ cup sliced walnut meats, ½ teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons thick cream, 1 teaspoon butter, yolks of 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon sweet herbs, if desired. Increase this and any recipe following sufficient to the needs of those served. Let there be an abundance prepared.

Prune and Apple Dressing.—This delectable dressing for the turkey is something of a novelty, and persons accustomed to it think both fowl and dressing inferior when bread is used. They claim that the latter absorbs the juices from the meat, while this makes it more juicy. Pare and cut apples as for pies. Wash fine, soft prunes and stone them. Mix them, uncooked, half and half. Stuff turkey, not too full. One quart required.

Royal Oyster Pie.—Make a good rich paste, and with it line a deep pudding dish. One of earthenware is best. Roll another piece of pastry nearly half an inch thick and cut it a little larger around than the top of the dish. Butter the edges of the dish, which fill with crusts of dry bread. Over it lay lightly pared a day in advance. Stir these ingredients well together, moistening with cider. Pack down and keep covered closely in a cool place. When filling the crust, and not before, add a teaspoon of good fresh butter to each pie. This mince may have added to it from time to time small portions of preserves, fruit jellies or juices. See that the mince meat is well packed down after each using.

Thanksgiving Pudding.—Pour 4 cups of hot, scalded milk over 1½ cups of common crackers and let stand until cool. Add 1 cup sugar, 4 eggs, slightly beaten, ½ a grated nutmeg, 1 teaspoon of salt and ½ cup of melted butter. Parboil 1½ cups raisins until soft, seed and add to the mixture. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake slowly 2½ hours, stirring after the first half hour to prevent raisins from settling. This may be made a day or two in advance and re-heated for serving.

Colonial Sauce.—Cream ½ cup of butter, and add very slowly 4 egg yolks, well beaten, and 1 cup of milk or cream. Flavor with ½ teaspoon of vanilla. Cook over hot fire until the mixture thickens as a custard, then pour over the whites of 4 eggs beaten stiff.

Delicious Squash Pies.—Choose a fine grain Hubbard squash of good flavor. Pare the squash, cut rather fine and steam until perfectly tender, keeping closely covered. Press through a sieve while warm to remove all strings. For two delectable pies take 2½ cups of sifted squash, add 1 scant teaspoon of salt, 1 heaping teaspoon of granulated sugar, 12 gratings of nutmeg, 1 scant half teaspoon of cinnamon, 1 saltspoon of ginger, the grated yellow skin each, of half a lemon and half an orange; mix thoroughly. Let 2 cups of sweet milk come to a boil in a double boiler, add a level teaspoon of butter, let it dissolve, then pour all slowly over the squash mixture, stirring hard and continuously. When the squash has cooled to luke-warm, add 3 well-beaten eggs, stirring lightly and continuously. When blended turn into deep pie tins lined with pastry, place carefully in the oven and bake 40 minutes. The temperature should be suitable for baking bread. The final touch of novelty is to spread the pies, just before serving, with strained honey, and add a spoonful of whipped cream to each pie.

CANALS BEAT RAILWAYS.

In Rate of Growth of Traffic in Past Twenty Years.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The annual blue book containing the canal statistics of the Dominion for the season of 1906 was issued on Wednesday. The figures show a large increase in the business between Canadian ports during the past twenty years particularly with regard to westward traffic. The growth has been considerable from Canadian to United States ports.

The up-bound traffic has been in larger volume than that moving eastward. Since 1887 the trade between United States by Canadian canals has grown largely. In this instance, however, the movement downward has been greater than upward. There has been an actual shrinkage in the up traffic between United States and Canadian ports. The eastbound business, however, has practically doubled.

The expansion of business with canals is relatively larger than that shown by Canadian railways.

The traffic moving up and down has increased 287 per cent. during the past twenty years. The westward business shows a gain of 368 per cent., while the eastward grew to the extent of 257 per cent.

While 57,966,715 tons of freight were carried by Canadian railways in 1906, as compared with 16,356,337 in 1887, the betterment was 254 per cent., as against 287 per cent. on the canals.

HID HIS MOTHER'S BODY.

Son Said Stranger Shot Her, and He Was Afraid to Tell.

A despatch from Utica, N.Y., says: Mrs. James Scott, of a farming settlement near Norwich, Chenango county, went riding with her son last Friday. She did not return with the young man, who said she had remained at the house of a friend. His stories did not correspond, and on Tuesday he was arrested. Search was kept up for the woman, and on Wednesday the son was taken with the searchers. The woman's body was found in some woods with a bullet wound in the back of her head. Young Scott has been in the Elmira Reformatory, and came out a few months ago on parole. He declares that he saw a man shoot his mother, and says he was too frightened to tell about it.

TRANSFER OF ESQUIMAULT.

Will be Immediately Handed Over to Canadian Government.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Notwithstanding recent rumors to the contrary, the naval station at Esquimault, B.C., will shortly pass into the control of the Canadian Government. The Imperial authorities, after having arranged nearly two years ago to hand over the dry dock and station at Esquimault to the Dominion, experienced some doubt as to whether the Canadian Government was in a position to maintain the efficiency of the establishment there as a naval base, but during his recent visit to England, the Minister of Marine gave the necessary assurances, with the result that the transfer is to be made without further delay.

ROYAL VISIT TO CANADA?

Prince Arthur of Connaught May Come Next Year.

A despatch from London says: The correspondent of the Canadian Associated Press has heard that the King will be represented by Prince Arthur of Connaught at the tercentenary of the founding of Quebec next year. The Prince is to be accompanied by an imposing suite, and it is likely that the Prince, after the Quebec celebration, may tour Canada. Calling on Wednesday at Clarence House, the Canadian Associated Press was told that nothing definite was known there regarding the Prince visiting Quebec, but it was not unlikely he might.

Roll another piece of pastry nearly half an inch thick and cut it a little larger around than the top of the dish. Butter the edges of the dish, which fill with crusts of dry bread. Over it lay lightly the round of pastry and place in the oven. While it is cooking place in a saucepan 2 tablespoons butter and 2 heaping tablespoons flour. Cook both together until they bubble, and pour upon them  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup of oyster liquor and 1 cup of sweet cream. Stir until smooth. Drop in the oysters,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints in this menu, or four or five choice oysters to each person. Cook until the oysters begin to ruffle and plump, then add 2 eggs, gradually and carefully, stirring constantly. So soon as they are all in, season the stew with a scant teaspoon of salt and  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon of pepper. Time your oysters so they will be done simultaneously with the crust. If anything must wait let it be the crust rather than the oysters. Lift the top crust carefully, lay it over a hot plate, remove the bread crusts and pour in the oysters. Replace the top crust and serve at once.

A New Mince Meat.—Two pounds of tender, well-cooked beef, chopped fine, 1 package of highly-flavored apples, 2 pounds of raisins and currants, 1 pound of citron,  $\frac{1}{2}$  pound of suet, 3 pounds of sugar, 1 tablespoon of powdered cinnamon, 1 teaspoon each of powdered nutmeg, cloves and salt. Pare, core and chop the apples. Plump the raisins in boiling water and the seeds can be easily removed. Wash currants through several waters, rubbing well, then spread to dry. These should be pre-

Kenny and Professor John Galbraith, members of the Canadian Government's Quebec Bridge Commission, a steel eye bar, thirty feet long, fourteen inches wide and two inches thick was subjected to a strain of 882 tons in the testing department of the Phoenix Iron Company at Phoenixville on Friday. The bar was similar to those used in the structure of the bridge. With 28 square inches of surface, the strain was 63,000 pounds to the square inch. The commissioners were gratified by the test, and the officers of the Iron Company made no secret of their elation. The bar was not made specially for the test, but is one of an order which the company is filing for a bridge to span the Missouri River at St. Louis.

DARING SAFE BLOWING.

Montreal Fruit Auction Company's Premises Robbed.

A despatch from Montreal says: One of the most daring safe-blowings ever perpetrated in this city was accomplished in the early hours of Sunday morning, in the Montreal Fruit Auction Company's premises at 32 Mountain street. The police say that as a piece of finished work it is one of the finest they have ever seen. Apparently there were three attempts before the men secured entrance to the building, but once inside they cleaned up things in an effective way. They secured cash and cheques amounting to $500.

DEATH BY EARTHQUAKES

Terrible Destruction Reported in Calabria.

A despatch from Rome says: The details received here during Thursday regarding the earthquake in Calabria on Wednesday tend to show that the damage done was much more extensive than at first estimated, but that the loss of life has not been great. The lowest estimates place the number of killed at about 20, and the highest at about 120. The shocks were especially severe in the southern end of the Calabrian peninsula, but throughout Calabria on Thursday there were scenes of desolation and despair.

The first shock was a tremendous one, and was followed by two others of larger proportions, which entirely destroyed two villages and reduced many houses in several others to ruins. The first shock, fortunately, brought the entire population of the villages into the open, many reaching the hills or open plains. Torrents of rain greatly increased the suffering among the homeless people.

Half the houses at Ferruzzano and Brancaleone collapsed and many persons were buried in the ruins, and at Sinigaglia and St. Ilario many are said to have lost their lives. Panic prevailed everywhere. Rocella, Jonica, Reggio, Cosenza, Barredio, Citta Nova, Palmi, Gerace Marina, and other towns also suffered from the shocks, but not so severely. The ancient cathedral at Torre di Gerace was thrown down, as was also an ancient tower.

Half the houses in the village of Gerace are in ruins.

During the confusion caused by the first earthquake shock, the prisoners in the jail at Catanzaro mutinied and were subdued with great difficulty. The female prisoners were particularly alarmed. So soon as the building experienced the first shock they began to scream and shout for the jailers, demanding their release and beating the doors until the whole place was in a terrible uproar. The prison officials did everything possible to calm the inmates, but panic broke out afresh every time another shock was experienced.

So soon as possible detachments of troops with relief trains were hurried to the scene.

LATER.

The latest reports from the affected districts place the number of dead at over 600 and the injured at 1,900. The troops are doing their utmost to diminish the suffering of the people. They work steadily, unmindful of fatigue, burying the dead, rescuing the living, distributing food and clothing and providing shelter.

The torrential rain which fell during the shocks added to the discomfort of the people, who, after the first quakes, rushed from their homes, and even yet refused to go under cover for fear of other shocks. More would doubtless have been killed had it not been for the fact that the majority of inhabitants rushed to the open after the first shock and escaped to the hills and plains.

The most damage was done in the southern end of the Calabrian Peninsula, where two villages were almost completely destroyed and many dwellings damaged in others. Rocella Jonica, Reggio, Cosenza, Briatico, Citanova, Palmi, Gerace Marina and other villages are among those damaged by the shock.

Among the terrifying scenes during the quakes was the panic of the prisoners in the jail at Catanzaro. They mutinied at the first shock and screamed and pounded on the doors and were quieted with great difficulty.

Shocks were still continuing on Thursday evening, and the earthquake was said almost to equal the quake of 1905 in extent and devastation.

Upwards of 1,500 miles of track will be completed during the present year, in addition to some 3,011 miles under construction.

Aunt Harriet's Thanksgiving Burglar

Very timid we felt, for we were alone in the house, Aunt Harriet and I, she having sent John to town to bank some money which had been paid her unexpectedly. I don't know what the hour was, but it was quite dark in the room when I was awakened by Aunt Harriet getting the old rifle off its hook over the bed. A man trying to get into the house, she told me in a hoarse whisper; she'd seen him with her own eyes, crouched down at the kitchen door. I heard a queer, picking, picking noise as Aunt Harriet tiptoed to the window.

Aunt Harriet, kneeling on the floor, rested the old rifle on the window ledge and pulled the rusty trigger. The bang was followed by the fall of a heavy body on the kitchen sloop. The rifle fell from Aunt Harriet's hands and she staggered across the room, screaming, "I've shot him, a burglar, and I only meant to scare him off!"

We sat on the edge of the bed, shivering with cold and fright, until broad daylight, and then went fearfully down stairs. I opened the kitchen door and there on the sloop lay—the biggest, fattest turkey I've ever seen. Its head was shot clean off its body.

In just "two shakes of a lamb's tail," to quote Aunt Harriet, I was on my knees beside that burglar, stripping off its feathers and telling Aunt Harriet that it, the turkey, was God sent for our Thanksgiving dinner.

Aunt Harriet could not see it in that light. "If only John had been home," she moaned, "this wouldn't have happened."

To myself I kept repeating, "I'm glad John wasn't home! I'm glad it did happen! I'm so glad it did happen!" And all the time I was ripping the feathers off, exposing larger and larger patches of white turkey skin.

Aunt Harriet had told me the night before that we couldn't have turkey for Thanksgiving because the foxes and the rump had swept away her whole flock, and she wouldn't pay the ruinous prices "folks was asking." She had decided she informed me, not to have the Centerville folks over. Not have turkey, and not have the Centerville folks over! Without these there would be no Thanksgiving for me.

"Stop, child!" Aunt Harriet came out of her daze and took the turkey, half stripped as it was, from me and put it in the store room. "That's one of Tom Ransom's turkeys, and we must settle for it."

Tom Ransom—I called him T. R.—was crossing to the house with two pails of milk as we drove up. He set down the pails and came to meet us.

"Seems to me you're astir pretty early in the day!" said he.

Aunt Harriet told him that we'd been astir pretty nearly all night. Then she told him of the turkey shooting, every detail of it, laying stress on the fact of having fired into the air.

T. R. was attentive. "So you fired into the air with a rifle that wasn't loaded, (Aunt Harriet insists to this day that she had withdrawn every charge from the old rifle before hanging it on its hook—"had done it with her own hands.") "Fired at a man and shot a turkey that was trying to get into your house!" he remarked. "Pretty good! Pretty good! No harm done so I can see. Have turkey for Thanksgiving when mebbe you won't intend to?"

Aunt Harriet said she wasn't intending to have turkey this year; she hadn't any of her own and she couldn't afford to pay this year's price for one. "This turkey wasn't mine," she explained—"it was yours."

"So-ho!" said T. R., "that's different;

MORE WHISKEY IS DRANK

The Consumption of Tobacco Also Has Increased.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The report of the Department of Inland Revenue for the last fiscal year (nine months to March 31) was issued on Wednesday. The revenue was $1,096,930, as compared with $1,435,642 for the preceding 12 months. The quantity of spirits produced was $5,061,389 proof gallons: All Canadian whiskey has to be kept in warehouse for two years before it can be sold. At the beginning of this year 17,034,420 proof gallons were in warehouse under the supervision of excise officers. In the nine months 303,594 gallons were exported, as against 277,905 gallons in the preceding 12 months. The foreign demand for Canadian distillery products is steadily increasing.

The average quantity of tobacco taken for consumption during the past four years was 13,899,089 pounds; for the last nine months the total was 12,101,678 pounds, a substantial increase. The number of cigars taken for consumption was 154,253,260, as against 182,178,436 in the preceding year. The annual consumption per head of spirits was .947 spirits, as against .861; beer, 5.585 gallons, as against 5.255; wine, .092 gallons (no increase), and tobacco, 2.953 pounds, as against 2.777 pounds.

During the fiscal period 29,154 gas meters were presented for verification, 5,918 were correct, 9,781 were running too fast and 13,319 too slow. Of electric light meters 19,461 were presented, 9,731 were correct, 5,426 fast, and 4,291 slow.

MONEY IN DEAD LETTER OFFICE.

The carelessness of some people in financial matters is evidenced by the annual report of the Post-Office Department. During the last nine months 3,906 letters, containing $15,692; 1,796 cheques for $213,319; 3,399 money and express orders, for $51,694, found their way to the Dead Letter Office.

The gross revenue of the Post Office for the fiscal period was $6,535,093, and the expenditure $5,452,791, leaving a surplus of $1,082,301.

The number of post-offices in operation on April 1st was 11,377. The gross postal revenue of Toronto was $998,951, the highest of any city in Canada. Other cities are:— like Perkin's for Thanksgiving dinner. The turkey is like the big bronze one he sent west for. I knew it all the time.—T. R."

Here is where Aunt Harriet's inconsistency showed itself. She had vowed she would not eat her Thanksgiving dinner with Tom Ransom and his sister, but now she vowed she would eat it with the Perkins and his wife. Yet she liked T. R. and Jane and she did not like like Perkins or his wife.

Not only did we invite the Centerville folks, but the Upton Corners cousins as well, and there are a lot of them. T. R. was there with a whole wagon load of folks; I don't know where he gathered them from, for I supposed Jane was all the folks he had and Aunt Harriet said she supposed so too.

Ike had a barrel of sweet cider on tap. T. R. saw to that. And we had a gala day—we all saw to that, all but Ike, who begged of us not to let the story of Aunt Harriet's burglar get out. I'm sure I don't know who was the first to tell it; I know I wasn't.

BELLEVILLE HOTEL DAMAGED.

Leaking Gas Explodes and Wrecks Front of Building.

A despatch from Belleville says: The new Balmoral Hotel, corner Front and Bridge Streets, was seriously damaged late on Friday night as the result of an explosion of gas. The front office of the hotel was badly wrecked, and the glass front blown across the street to the Dominion Bank office. Two guests asleep in the room above the office were thrown across the room, but not seriously hurt. The noise of the explosion aroused almost the entire city, and it was at first thought from the fact that the scene of the explosion was near the bank, that an attempt was being made by burglars on the vaults.

SORRY, AND WON'T DO IT AGAIN.

So Says Sir Wilfrid to Japan, and the Mikado Accepts Apology.

A despatch from Ottawa says: "His Excellency the Governor-General and the Canadian Government will be pleased if you will convey to his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Japan their very deep regret for the unfortunate occurrences at Vancouver, and if you will also convey to his Imperial Majesty the assurances that the Canadian authorities will use their utmost efforts to prevent any recurrence of such regrettable events."

So said Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his letter of apology to Japan for the Vancouver riots.

"His Majesty received the message from the Governor-General of Canada and the Government of Canada with the greatest gratification, and notes with much satisfaction the earnest intention of the Governor-General and Government of Canada to promote cordial and friendly relations which exist between the British Empire and Japan."

So says Ambassador Macdonald in reply. Thus the two nations are friends again.

SAVED CHILD'S LIFE.

Gallant Action of O. Sciotte, a C.P.R. Brakeman.

A despatch from Montreal says: When the Ottawa train from Montreal left Rigaud on Tuesday night, O. Sciotte, Brakeman of the Smith's Falls Division, performed an action which saved the life of a small child, who but for his bravery and presence of mind would certainly have been killed. When the train leaves Rigaud the brakeman stands on the front of the engine in order to be able to open the switch a short distance up the line. Sciotte, standing there, saw in front of him a small girl right in the middle of the track. He shouted to her, but could not attract her attention. There was no time to stop the train, so without a moment's hesitation and at the imminent risk of his own life Sciotte,

ALFONSO A CONSUMPTIVE.

Will Consult a Specialist During Visit to London.

A despatch from Madrid says: The alarming reports circulated earlier in the month regarding the health of King Alfonso appear to be confirmed. It is understood that his Majesty, who will travel under the strictest incognito as Duke of Toledo during his coming visit to London, will submit to the examination of a specialist in tuberculosis, from which disease his father died. The King's open air life has thus far kept the hereditary disposition in abeyance, and an operation was performed on him recently in the hope of checking the growing symptoms of consumption.

TWENTY YEARS IN PRISON.

Would-be Murderer of Girl Sentenced at Sherbrooke Assizes.

A despatch from Sherbrooke, Que., says: Wednesday was sentence day in the King's Bench, and George Albert Greenhill, found guilty of attempting to murder Lilly Linn, at Melbourne, on the 3rd of July last, was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary.

I can see: Have turkey for Thanksgiving when maybe you won't intend to?

Aunt Harriet said she wasn't intending to have turkey this year; she hadn't any of her own and she couldn't afford to pay this year's price for one. "This turkey wasn't mine," she explained. "It was yours."

"So he" said T. R., "that's different; it put the shoe on father's foot as it were. I'll have turkey for Thanksgiving and I won't intending to have it."

Now this wasn't what Aunt Harriet wanted. She wanted the turkey, but haggle down the price. She wouldn't have cheated T. R. or anybody else out of a turkey for the best farm in her county, but she would beat him or anybody else she could on the price of the turkey and just a little bit on the weight, too. This is what she set out to do. She looked away over T. R.'s head at the hills. She looked very innocent, very honest. T. R. leaned his elbows on the fence and looked right at Aunt Harriet. He winked. I don't know whether he winked at me or at Aunt Harriet. She didn't see the wink and I did—and I saw just how shrewd and knowing he looked.

"I knowed Aunt Harriet Ann," he declared to me afterwards. "I knowed her long afore you did; I knowed her plans and her habits. I see just what she was a driving at all the time. Harriet, she's a hull lot of fun sometimes."

Aunt Harriet went on to explain. She didn't see how she could 'a' done it no how, the rifle not being loaded and she a-firing into the air as she certainly did, and the turkey being on the stoop where she'd seen it with her own eyes. "But as it was killed on her promise she felt that she ought to be at some loss." Of course the turkey had no business there! She hadn't meant to have a turkey, really couldn't afford one at present prices, and this turkey wasn't just what she'd 'a' bought anyway; it was a gobbler and gobblers were never as plump and fat as hen turkeys. This one was; it weighed 20 pounds if it weighed one.

It was then that Ike Perkins spoke up. I never did like Ike Perkins. He had got the turkey story from Aunt Harriet with all its details, standing unseen behind our wagon. "Well," said he, with a chuckle, "since you leave it to me—" They hadn't left it to him that I know of.

"Remember," interposed T. T. flicking his boot with a branch, "remember that that was a valuable turkey, and turkeys is turkeys this year."

Ike sniffed; he always sniffed when he was going to be particularly disagreeable. "Wall, of course, the turkey was your'n, Tom, but it had no business on Mrs. Bronson's stoop a-fryin' 'a' git into her house, and so she didn't mean to shoot it—and fired into the air, and the gun won't loaded, these is what you might call extenuatin' circumstances." Ike had been serving on the jury the week before. "So I'd say, as Mrs. Bronson here is a neighbor and a widow woman, and you used to be a-making up to her when you was young, I'd say, you take the turkey and cook it and have Mrs. Bronson over to help eat it. Hey a bar!" of sweet cider and Mrs. Bronson and her folks and me over to umpire the thing—eh?

"Any more?" There was mischief behind T. R.'s glasses. "I guess we'd better consult Jane." Jane was T. R.'s sister and housekeeper.

I didn't think Jane was very well pleased with the arrangements when she was consulted. She didn't like Ike any better than I did nor than T. R. did either, for that matter. However, when T. R. explained the case fully to Jane she laughed merrily and fell in quite heartily with the plan.

Aunt Harriet wasn't satisfied with the arrangement at all. She declared to me, driving home, that she'd send the turkey to Tom, but she would not go to Tom's for Thanksgiving dinner.

We'd just home and got the horse put up in her stall when Tom's hired man drove in for the turkey. He gave Aunt Harriet a note which read:

"You and all your folks meet me at

TRAGIC FATE OF BLIND WOMAN.

Was Warming Herself at Fire When Clothing Ignited.

A despatch from Whitley, Ont., says: Burned to death while warming herself at a wood fire was the fate that befell Mrs. Walters, an aged blind woman, on Thursday. Mrs. Walters, who was 58 years of age, lived with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Pascoe, at Lot 1, Concession 3, East Whitley. She was warming herself by the fire in her bedroom, when her clothing caught fire. Her screams brought her daughter, who found the aged lady in flames. The fire was quickly extinguished, but not before Mrs. Walters had been so badly burned that she died in less than an hour.

EMPEROR OF CHINA SUNK.

She Lies in Victoria Harbor With Her Deck Awash.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of China sank alongside her dock in this harbor on Thursday. She lies on her port side at an angle of 45 degrees, with her main deck awash. A diver has found that her sea cocks are open, but no one knows how they were opened. She lies on a mud bottom, but the problem of righting her involves the task of keeping her from turning turtle. The Empress of China is a mail steamer, valued at about $1,000,000, and was due to sail for Hong Kong on Thursday. She is 485 feet in length and was built in England in 1891. The company expects to have the vessel ready to sail next week. She was loaded with flour, cigarettes and pig head, and much of this cargo has been damaged by water.

COST IS TOO GREAT.

Government Abandons Idea for Present of Enlarging Rideau Hall.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Government has abandoned for the present, or, at any rate, until Parliament has been consulted, the idea of enlarging Rideau Hall. The only tender received for the proposed addition was in the vicinity of $275,000, but this is considerably higher than the amount mentioned to the House last session.

HUGE SEAS SWEEP DECKS

Tragedies of the Great Gale on the Atlantic.

A despatch from North Sydney, N.S., says: With Stars and Stripes floating at half-mast from the mainmast head, the Gloucester schooner Titania, Capt. Patrick Vale, sailed into port on Wednesday afternoon, reporting the loss of a man, and showing signs of hard experience in Monday's awful gale. The Titania left Gloucester Thursday last, on a handlining trip to the Banks. The wind, according to Capt. Vale, attained at a time a velocity of eighty miles an hour. Tuesday morning about one o'clock John Malmberg, a Swede, who was alone on the watch, was heard to cry: "My God, mate, here's an awful sea coming. The cry was scarcely fin-and presence of mind would certainly have been killed. When the train leaves Pigaud the brakeman stands on the front of the engine in order to be able to open the switch a short distance up the line. Scotte, standing there, saw in front of him a small girl right in the middle of the track. He shouted to her, but could not attract her attention. There was no time to stop the train, so without a moment's hesitation and at the imminent risk of his own life Scotte, grasping the cow-catcher with one hand, leaped forward, and as the engine reached the child he lifted her to a place of safety.

NOW GIVE THANKS.

Frosted leaf-forest in the air—
Incense sweet, beyond compare;
Nuts a-dropping, one by one—Squirrels' harvest has begun.

Russet leaf, and purple, gold,
Turning into fragrant mould;
On the vagrant breezes come Muffled sound of pheasant's drum.

In the bin the orchard's board,
Ruddy treasure heap—is stored;
In the mow, the golden grain,
Fruits of summer's sun and rain.

Fields that harvests rich have blessed,
Now dismantled, take their rest;
Brown the stubble, bare the soil;
Now give thanks and eat your fill.

Hot water used both internally and externally is highly recommended by medical men as a cure for insomnia. Bathing the feet in hot water is said to be particularly efficacious.

To Extract Splinters.—Take a wide-mouthed bottle and almost fill it full of hot water, then put the part with the splinter over the mouth of the bottle and press tightly. The suction will draw the flesh down and in a minute or two the hot steam will make the splinter come out, and draw the soreness out immediately.

How to Treat a Sprain.—Sprains occur most frequently at the wrist and ankle joint. They should not be made light of, for if neglected their results may be permanent. Put the joint in such a position that it will have complete rest. Soak in water as hot as can be borne, gradually increasing the temperature for half an hour, then apply hot cloths for another half hour and finally at moist bandage, keeping the part elevated. Massage is useful later, and when the swelling goes down the joint should be supported by either a rubber bandage, adhesive straps, or a plaster of Paris splint.

It took but one mighty sea off the Grand Banks to sweep every boat and every movable thing from his schooner's deck into the sea.

Marks Bros. Here Next Week.

No company travelling to-day has a more enviable reputation than the well-known and popular company bearing the name of Marks Bros., who will appear at the Brisco Opera House for three nights, commencing Monday, Nov. 4th. It is an organization which is accounted throughout the country as a standard of excellence, and the reputation it has acquired during the last few years of success will be more than sustained during the coming season. The company is a large and well balanced one. It is perfectly equipped with special scenery and electrical effects necessary for a first-class performance, each play being presented with perfect scenery and beautiful costumes. The opening play will be "The Wages of Sin," and between the acts some good specialties are introduced. Seats now on sale.

Arrested for Theft.

At the request of the Kingston police, Chief Graham, on Friday night took in charge a young Englishman, who will probably have to face a charge of theft in the police court at Kingston.

The young man hired a rig at Walter Jenkins' livery on Friday, and did not return with it. About the time he left Mr. Jenkins also missed $25 from his office. Suspicion pointed towards the Englishman, and thus his arrest.

Constable James Craig was sent to take the prisoner to Kingston.

The story of a young man stealing from his employer, was told in the Kingston police court, Tuesday, when Sidney Harrison, an Englishman, aged twenty-one, who came out to this country in April last, admitted taking $25, the property of Walter Jenkins, liveryman. Jenkins was working on a new house and left the money in his coat pocket. He had $45 in all, but Harrison only took $25. I plead guilty to taking the money, said Harrison, to the magistrate. I am sorry for what I have done, and will be willing to go and work for Mr. Jenkins, so as to pay him back. That's a very easy way of getting out of wrong-doing, remarked the court. I will sentence you to six months in the common jail. Harrison left the city with a horse and rig belonging to Mr. Jenkins, but the latter did not push this charge against him, as the outfit was returned. The prisoner was arrested at Napanee by Chief Graham.

Stomach troubles, Heart and Kidney ailments, can be quickly corrected with prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The prompt and surprising relief which this remedy immediately brings is entirely due to its Restorative action upon the controlling nerves of the stomach, etc.

A weak Stomach, causing dyspepsia, a weak Heart with palpitation or intermittent pulse, always means weak stomach nerves or Heart nerves. Strengthen these inside or controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly these ailments will disappear. Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. will mail samples free.
Write for them. A test will tell. Your health is certainly worth this simple trial.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at ronto, on Oct. 22nd, when Miss Nellie Norine Pew, youngest daughter of Mrs. R. Delane, Niagara Falls, Ont., became the wife of Sidney L. E. Rose,

B. S., youngest son of the late D. E.
Rose, of Tamworth, and a graduate of the School of Mining, Kingston. The bride was attired in a brown pannee velvet suit, with hat to match. They were attended by Mrs. H. K. Wilson, Youngstown, Ohio, and Clinton H.
Rose, Tamworth, sister and brother of the groom. A supper was afterwards served at McConkey's, to the bridal party and a few intimate friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome diamond and pearl pin. After spending a short time with the groom's

Ottawa Journal.

It is intimated by a contemporary that if a few weeks rest does not cure Mr. Aylesworth of the ear ailment from which he is suffering, he may retire from the government and public life. It would be a pity. Public life does not offer Mr. Aylesworth enolment as sure and material as he could earn in his law practice. He may be said, therefore, to have sacrificed his personal interest for the service of his fellow Canadians. And whatever may be said of his individual fitness for the game of politics, he has this one point to his credit: that with little to gain and much to lose he consented to enter the service of the people. His bitterest political foe should be able to wish him better health.

Napanee and Tamworth Districts.

The Gold Medal Contest.

The elocutionary contest held in the Trinity Church, Tuesday evening, was one of the best ever held by the Epworth League. The large attendance signified that the popularity of these contests has not decreased in the slightest since they were first started about three years ago. The gold medal was carried off by contestant No. 3, Miss Eleanor Bader, who is to be congratulated upon her success. The other contestants should not feel the least discouraged after the manner in which they handled the difficult selections. The Judges, Messrs. A. C. Baker, Dr. C. H. Wartman and W. J. Shannon had a very difficult task in hand as the contest was keen throughout. Mr. Baker gave the Judges report and announced the winning contestant, Rev. W. H. Emsley acted as chairman and presented the Medal in his usual manner. While awaiting the decision of the Judges, the audience received a rich treat. Mr. Emsley called on Miss Spink, of Winnipeg, for a recitation, who kindly responded. It was so thoroughly enjoyed by all that an encore was necessary. As the judges were not yet ready Mr. Emsley related a very interesting tale which held the attention of everyone, although the abrupt end was a decided disappointment. A good musical programme was also rendered as follows: instrumental duet, Mrs. S. Lockridge and Miss Helen Williams; vocal solo, Mr. Chas. Fisher; instrumental solo, Miss Beatrice Baughan; vocal duet, Misses Cairns and Mantell; vocal duet, Mr. Black and Mr. Steacy. The contestants and their selections were as follows: No. 1, Polly's Temperance Speech, Miss Ida Henderson; No. 2, A Sore Temptation, Miss Mabel Madden; No. 3, Sacrifice the Victory Spirit, Miss Eleanor Baker; No. 4, Two Fires, Mrs. Menzo Grooms; No. 5, Failure, Miss Edna French. Mr. W. H. Steacy superintended the contest.

THE BEST FLOUR.

DAFOE'S NONESUCH
DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flours in the market.

When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

CHOICE CORN MEAL and BUCKWHEAT FLOUR always on hand.
